U. S. Appeal For Refugees Rejected By England

Marshall Is Told Jews Can Be Housed Only in Germany; 50 Held in Bomb Scare

Secretary of State George C. Marshall revealed yesterday that he tried in vain to dissuade Britain from returning the Exodus 1947 refugees to Germany this week.

He said the State Department was keenly aware from the start that the affair would have unfortunate results, and urged British officials to reconsider their decision to ship the Palestine-bound refugees to Hamburg.

The British stuck by their plans, he added, on the grounds that the only housing facilities available for the displaced persons were in Germany.

(In London, a Foreign Office spokesman declined to comment on Marshall's disclosure.)

A delegation from the American Jewish Labor Council called on State Department officials meanwhile to demand that the United States place the Palestine situation before the United Nations Security Council.

The delegation asked the State Department to "call on the British government to cease her terror campaign and remove all police and military forces from Palestine, and to urge the immediate admission into Palestine of Jewish refugees aboard ships and in Cyprus concentration camps."

50 Jews Under Arrest; Bomb Planter Sought

Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 10 (AP).—Fifty of the Jewish Exodus 1947 refugees are under arrest and a search is on for those responsible for planting a bomb aboard one of the three transports which brought them to Germany, a British official announced today.

The official did not disclose the reason for the arrests. Some of those held were believed suspected of having led the resistance to debarkation aboard the transport Ocean Vigour Monday and the Runnymede Park yesterday, when the Jews were subdued with truncheons and fire hoses.

The remainder of the 4311 Exodus refugees, intercepted aboard their immigrant ship off Palestine in mid-July, were in displaced persons camps.

The Jews were taken to two camps near Luebeck, where, one of them said, they will stage a sit-down strike to protest possible classification as displaced persons. One evidence of the strike was the fact that most of the refugees refused to tell the British their national origins.

A hunger strike by 100 Jews at Poppendorf, larger of the two camps, was abandoned today.

(In Berlin, a spokesman for the Jewish community announced that in protest against the return of the refugees all Jewish offices in the city would be closed throughout Thursday.)

Exodus Considered For Veterans Housing

The Exodus 1947, used by Jews seeking entry to Palestine, was considered here last fall for possible use as a floating veterans' housing center, District officials revealed last night.

Emil A. Press, engineer in the department of sanitary engineering, said he was a member of an inspection party which traveled to Norfolk, Va., to appraise the ship, then known as the President Warfield.

Indonesian Official Confesses Guerilla Aid

Batavia, Java, Sept. 10 (AP).—Dr. Mohammed Isa, Indonesian Republican vice governor of Sumatra, has been arrested for "illegal activities" and has confessed that he financed a guerilla unit in the Dutch-held area of Sumatra, it was said authoritatively today.

A Dutch communique reported that five Germans, former members of the German navy, had been arrested near Malang in eastern Java.

'Ike' Dodges Commitment On Running

Observers Think Door Is Still Open For a Bandwagon

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower yesterday treated the Eisenhower-for-President vision as an "impossibility," but he declined to say whether he would or would not run if nominated.

He said that he would not "connive" to get the nomination. He said that no one could "run" him in a race for the nomination, and he said he "deplored" the formation of Eisenhower-for-President clubs.

"If you're nominated, will you run?" asked a reporter.

General Eisenhower said he did not see why a man had to answer such a hypothetical question; and, after putting the matter in the realm of "impossibilities" like a trip to the moon, he said that there was no use answering.

Door Seen Still Open

Consequently, most political observers agreed that the door still was open for an Eisenhower handwagon. They will continue to think this, apparently, until General "Ike" goes as far as Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman went in 1884, with his "I will not accept if nominated and will not serve if elected," or as far as Gen. George C. Marshall went last January when he said "I never could be drafted," just before taking the oath as Secretary of State.

Former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Republican nominee for President in 1936, yesterday sought to clear up the mystery as to General Eisenhower's politics.

"If the General is a candidate," said Landon, "it will be for the Republican, not the Democratic nomination."

Factor At Convention

Landon, in a letter to Columnist Raymond Moley, also said that unless General Eisenhower takes himself out of the picture by some "unequivocal" statement, "he will be a factor at the Philadelphia convention, whether an announced candidate or not."

And Ike's home state of Kansas, Landon said, will be for him 100 per cent.

It could be that General Eisenhower thought that he was making an "unequivocal" statement yesterday. However, when the news conference in his Pentagon office was over, reporters were not able to quote any "No" that would definitely puncture the boom.

At the outset, General Eisenhower was asked about a report that he was going to issue a statement in connection with the Eisenhower-for-President clubs that have been springing up in the country.

Call Clubs "Mistaken Idea"

"I frankly deplore the organization of any club of that type," the general said. "I am sure I would be delighted to claim the people in these organizations as friends, but I have never heard of them and don't know any of them. I sincerely hope that no one will go into them and spend their time and hard-earned money. I earnestly think it's a mistaken idea."

He was asked about former

U. S. Officials Tell Joint House-Senate Unit of Difficulties

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Nation's top housing authorities yesterday agreed that the United States is building only about half the homes it needs because of high prices of materials and construction.

The experts told a joint Senate-House Committee on Housing that the causes of high prices in the building industry are numerous, but there was apparent agreement on what those causes are.

The housing problem must be solved, and speedily, the authorities warned, because a generation of children is growing up under such "vicious" housing conditions that not only their welfare but that of the Nation is threatened.

One hopeful note was struck by the statement there are some indications that prices are beginning to level off a little. For the first time in years, salesmen are taking buyers to lunch, the experts quipped.

Experts Attending

The experts, who gathered round-table fashion with the committee included: Housing Expediter Frank Creedon; Raymond M. Foley, administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency; H. E. Riley, chief Labor Department statistician on construction; T. B. King, loan director, Veterans' Administration; George W. Thompson, chief of codes and specifications, Bureau of Standards; A. B. Groves, assistant director, Bureau of Census; E. L. Mayers, chief of code section, construction division, Department of Commerce; Kurt Mack, assistant to Foley and others.

The picture as it now stands is something like this:

The United States needs 1,500,000 new homes a year to provide a minimum of decent housing for its citizens.

The market will take only about 820,000, however, because prices

Order to Release Kathleen Durant Signed by Judge

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 10 (AP). A final order for the release of former Wac Capt. Kathleen Nash Durant from the Alderson, W. Va., Reformatory for Women on $5000 bond was signed today by United States District Judge Ben Moore.

District Attorney Leslie E. Given notified the court that the Government might appeal Judge Moore's decision in a habeas corpus proceeding that Mrs. Durant was a civilian and not subject to an Army court martial. She was convicted by court martial in Germany and sentenced to five years for complicity in the theft of the Hesse crown jewels.

In voiding the court martial conviction, Judge Moore said he was not ruling on her guilt or innocence. He held that because she had a certificate of service and had completed her terminal leave period before she was arrested by Army military police in June, 1946, that she had reverted to civilian status.

Ship Rocket Called Vital Navy Weapon

Adm. Sherman Says Perfection Will Strengthen Fleet

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Perfection of the Navy's latest weapons, the heavy bombardment rocket-fired-from warships, will enlarge the ability of the U. S. fleet to carry out two of its three major functions, a top admiral said yesterday.

Vice Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, deputy chief of naval operations, told a press conference that the launching of a 13-ton V-2 rocket from the aircraft carrier Midway last Saturday demonstrated that we can "do the same thing again in quantity."

Actual appearance of hard-hitting guided missile warships—firing explosives 200 miles or more—may be some time off, he indicated.

Greater Effectiveness

But the new type of warship made possible, said Sherman, will increase the fleet's effectiveness in carrying out these two fundamental roles:

1. Support of land military operations—by extending the range of ship bombardment many miles inland.

2. Use of the fleet as an instrument of diplomatic policy.

Admiral Sherman did not elaborate on the latter point, but he obviously referred to the probable extension of warship bombardment range to inland points.

Rocket-firing warships will not aid the Navy in its third basic mission, to dominate the sea lanes, the Admiral stated. Precision weapons are required to destroy enemy ships and planes and gain control of the seas, and rockets lack such accuracy, he added.

"Another aspect of the rocket development," the Admiral said, "is that at the present time there is no effective way to wage war between two large land masses such as Europe-Asia and America.

Round Trip Planes

"Eventually we will have airplanes which can make the round trip, or rockets which can cross the ocean, but that is a long way off. In order to use present weapons we have to use floating or fixed advance bases—ships or land."

Even when we may be able to shoot rockets thousands of miles, Sherman went on, "we'll only be swapping punches unless we can get closer to enemy than he is to us."

Types of vessels other than aircraft carriers may be equipped

Corn Crop 884 Million Bushels Shy

Agriculture Dept. Estimate Shows Smallest Yield In 11 Years Due

Post Reporter

A corn crop of 2403 million bushels, 884 million below last year's record of 3287 million, was forecast yesterday by the Department of Agriculture's Crop Reporting Board.

The estimate is 256 million bushels below that of August 1, and 33 million below the mid-month estimate of August 15.

Adding to the bad news was an estimated drop of 19 million bushels in the wheat harvest during the month. Wheat is estimated at 1408 million bushels, far and away the largest in history. The August 1 estimate was for 1427 million. Last year's wheat crop, the former record, was 1155 million bushels.

From now on, no improvement in corn can be expected from weather conditions. But hanging over yesterday's report is the threat of the catastrophic damage an early frost might impose.

"It now seems likely that at least 75 per cent of all corn will have matured by the average date of first killing frost. In Iowa, about one third of the crop would be caught if frost occurred on the average date."

The report, as usual, came at 3 p. m., after the close of the Nation's grain markets, where another hectic day of trading sent many grains soaring to still new highs.

All grains made new seasonal tops. Corn and oats reached all-time records, which they have been doing daily all week. September corn hit $2.64¼ and oats, $1.23½. In the spot market No. 2 yellow corn brought $2.68¼, a new record for yellow eash corn.

Soybeans were up the limit, eight cents a bushel, for the fifth consecutive day. Lard also went up the limit of $2 a hundred for the second day, and then slumped off.

September wheat hit $2.77¾ early in the day, and many futures jumped the full 10 cents permissible in one day's trading. A new all-time high for May futures was made at $2.84.

The rampaging wheat market forecast higher prices for bread and other bakery items soon. At Buffalo standard family patent flour went to $8.60 a hundredweight, the highest since World War I. The price was 20 cents above Tuesday, and 55 cents above Saturday's high.

Hogs followed the common price trend, jumping from 50 cents to $1 a hundred pounds, to a new record of $31 at Sioux City, Iowa, and $30.75 at Omaha.

Butter and eggs also went up

U. S. Warns 25 Nations Of Grain Export Cut

The State Department has warned more than 25 nations that United States grain exports during fiscal year 1948 probably will be cut more than 10 per cent, due to the short American corn crop.

Although the warning did not presume to tell the foreign governments what to do about their rations, it made plain that world prospects indicate a 10 per cent cut in current food allotments.

The unmistakable implication is that grain importing nations must tighten their belts now to get through the winter.

Marshall Urges Aid To Europe to Avert 'Intolerable Hunger'

Anglo-American Agreement

Ruhr Coal Mines to Be Placed Under German Management

The Ruhr's coal mines will be returned to German management and administration as part of an Anglo-American agreement to boost output in the richest coalfields of Europe.

The agreement, announced yesterday, is the result of more than four weeks of discussions in Washington between American and British technical experts.

It recommends to the two governments that a German coal management be established as quickly as possible in the hope that German miners will produce more coal if they are working under German direction.

The new management will be responsible to the American and British military governments for the efficient operation of the industry, and will be supervised by a joint American-British Control Group acting for the military commanders.

This will give the United States for the first time an equal share in the over-all direction of Ruhr coal mining.

Not only will Germans have direct responsibility for managing their mines, but a new department, equivalent to a ministry of coal, will be set up in the German Bizonal Economic Council to administer the mining industry.

The change in management and control is only one of many recommendations made by the experts, all of them aimed at getting more Ruhr coal out of the ground and making more of it available for German and European recovery.

The recommendations show clearly, however, that no single magic formula could be found to produce more coal. Food; transport, housing and a host of related questions were considered by the negotiators, but many of them were left for later settlement.

The conference recommended, for example, that larger stocks of food be built up and kept in the large cities and the mining towns than elsewhere in the combined zones. It also insisted that the present rations be met punctually, with gradual increases provided first of all in the cities, where the people cannot get as much "offration" fruit and vegetables as in the farming areas.

The conference also recommended much stricter penalties and in-

Secretary Declines To Commit Self On Necessity for Congress Session

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Secretary Marshall made his first official admission yesterday that stopgap help for Europe would be needed urgently this winter.

He said it would have to come "to meet the immediate threat of intolerable hunger and cold," and before any longer-range reconstruction program could possibly come into effect.

The necessary authority for such stopgap help can come only from Congress, he said, but "the question of how the necessary congressional authority is to be obtained must await developments of the next few weeks."

He was pressed at his news conference to say whether a special session would be necessary, but replied that he could not comment further right now.

First Official Warning

Until yesterday the State Department had made no public and official warning of the gathering crisis in Europe, except for Undersecretary Robert A. Lovett's informal remarks at his press conference last week.

Yesterday, however, Secretary Marshall not only backed up Lovett's grim predictions of a week ago but made them emphatic in a formal statement. From now on, he indicated, the United States Government would be battling an immediate economic crisis in western Europe as well as trying to work out a longer-range program of putting Europe back on its feet.

The Secretary's statement reemphasized that the crisis in Europe had been made more urgent by bad weather, crop shortages and financial restrictions by "certain governments." In this he was obviously referring to the swift exhaustion of Britain's dollar reserves and the end of convertibility between sterling and dollars.

The immediate needs, he went on, could not wait for the broader reconstruction program to be completed.

Gives Probable Timetable

He then outlined the probable timetable, as follows:

By late October the Adminstration expects to have "available working papers" on the basis of which Congress can begin to study Europe's winter needs of food and fuel.

By that time the various congressional committees of inquiry will have returned from Europe. Soon thereafter, the Secretary said, complete data for the longer-range recovery program should be "screened" and made available to Congress.

The Secretary emphasized in his formal statement, and again in answering questions, that the stopgap help would have to be part and parcel of larger program.

His timetable suggested clearly that a direct request for stopgap help would not be made to Congress without at least some basic material to show how much Europe would need from the United States over the next four years, and how much the United States could supply.

He said there was not yet enough

Food, Dollar Shortages Hit French Hard

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Paris (by air mail).—There was a day when one could cite the axiom that two good harvests would repair the economic ravages of war. Statesmen could speak of "vis mediatrix naturae"—the healing power of nature.

But with modern industrial states and with modern methods of war, the axiom is shattered. And as far as France is concerned, it didn't even get two good harvests.

Its economic plight, for these and other reasons, is cruel. A nation which before the war grew almost all of its own food and even exported considerable amounts of fruit and vegetables, it must now import large quantities of grain.

Worse, the imports of food which might have come from eastern Europe and could have been paid for by export of French manufactured products are now cut off by the economic division between Russian Europe and the west.

This means that France is im-

Antitrust Suit Filed Against 3 Glass Firms

Attorney General Tom Clark announced yesterday that a civil anti-trust action has been filed in Toledo, Ohio, charging three major glass firms with "conspiracy to monopolize" the glass fiber industry in the United States.

The defendants were also accused of conspiring with nine foreign companies in Holland, France, England, Italy and Canada "to buttress their monopoly" by dividing territories and getting exclusive patents rights.

The three American firms named in the suit are the Owens-Illinois Glass Co. and Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., both of Toledo, and the Corning Glass Works, of Corning, N. Y.

Clark said in a statement that the alleged conspiracy sought to "dominate and control the development of the fiber glass industry," many of whose products are used in housing.

British Strive For Army Cut, Coal Peace

Dollar Saving Moves Come as World Bank Frowns on Stopgap Aid

London, Sept. 10 (AP).—John J. McCloy, American President of the World Bank, said tonight that Americans were still willing to lend Europe money for "productive purposes," but were beginning to question whether dollar loans were the answer to Europe's problems.

His statement came as British leaders worked on a dollar-saving program of further curtailment in the military forces and plugged away with prospects of success at the Yorkshire coal strike—two phases of an economic situation which Winston Churchill said threatened "a winter of privation more severe than any we endured during the war."

In a BBC broadcast, McCloy said Americans were "faced with a constant flood of bad news—economic and political—some of it exaggerated, but all of it bad" so that "the impression exists that even the $3,750,000,000 loan to England—a sizeable sum by any calculation—has had so little beneficial effect on the situation that it has put in doubt the efficacy of all loans."

Stopgap Loans Out

The World Bank president—here for the annual meeting of the board of directors of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and International Monetary Fund—also ruled out, at a news conference, the possibility that World Bank loans might be obtained as a stopgap for purchase of food and other consumer goods until some kind of Marshall Plan is effective.

"I think you can say that we are not in the stopgap business," he told a questioner.

McCloy explained that the International Bank was for the purpose of stimulating long-term international investments for productive purposes and would have to give increasing attention to Latin America, Asia, Africa and the Middle East, aside from Europe. France has indicated her purpose of seeking a 500-million-dollar loan.

Clayton Urges Trade Charter Be Universally Accepted

By the United Press

Undersecretary of State William L. Clayton last night appealed for universal acceptance of the International Trade Charter adopted at Geneva, Switzerland, last month by the United States and 16 other world trade powers.

In a broadcast from Paris, he praised the work of the Geneva conference as a "miracle" of international cooperation. He predicted that the charter could open the way to a great expansion in world production and distribution and a rise in living standards everywhere.

The charter commits the world's 17 major trading nations to a reciprocal policy of nondiscrimination in tariff laws. It also lays down definite rules under which import and export quotas—which Clayton called the most serious existing barriers to world trade—can be limited and eventually abandoned.

The 17 states represented at Geneva will submit the charter to a world conference of 50 to 60 nations at Havana, Cuba, in November.

In a direct bid for popular American support of the charter, Clayton said the U. S. delegation, which he headed, had succeeded in obtaining all the major provisions demanded by business, labor and farm interests in this country without sacrificing the needs and practical requirements of the other signatories.

He said the pact made detailed provisions to meet emergency conditions and to fit the diverse economies.

"This is the only kind of a charter which would work," he said. "It is the only kind that would provide us with a real alternative to anarchy and chaos in the commerce of the world."

Clayton emphasized his belief that the trade charter is an essential to the success of the United States' foreign policy.

"If we cannot reduce the barriers to world trade and thus make possible a great expansion in the production, distribution and consumption of goods throughout the world, there is little hope that any aid we may extend under the Marshall proposal will accomplish its purpose or be more than a stopgap measure," he said.

Private Employment Gains 21% in Year to Total 232,000

Private industry employment climbed to 232,000 persons here in fiscal 1947, an increase of 21 per cent over the previous year, the Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board disclosed yesterday.

Fred C. Thomas, director of industrial safety, attributed the increase to the easing of material shortages.

"In general," he explained, "people seem to be catching up on needs they couldn't meet during war time."

Despite the 40,000 new workers in private industry, the rate of lost-time injury accidents dropped from 19.80 to 17.66 per million man hours worked, the board told the Commissioners in its annual report.

Fatal industrial injuries also were reduced from 21 during the 1946 fiscal year to 19 this year, the report said.

Non-fatal injuries, by actual count, were 28,450—3644 more than last year—but compared with the larger number of workers, represented a lower accident rate per hours worked, the board explained.

A total of 5531 industrial safety inspections and reinspections were made during fiscal 1947 and 2645 notices to correct violations were issued. More than 2780 violations (some noted the previous year) were eliminated, the board revealed.

Bevin Wants Lend-Lease Again If We Won't Dig Up Our Gold

London, Sept. 10 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin suggested tonight that the United States revive wartime lend-lease to save the economies of European countries if it doesn't favor his proposal to redistribute Fort Knox gold.

"I do not mind whether it is lease-lend or that," Bevin said, referring to the Fort Knox redistribution plan in a speech to visiting American Legionnaires.

"But all I say is this—that you can't get settlement in the world unless we get these economic conditions right."

Bevin's comment was his first elucidation of a remark made in his speech to the Trades Union Congress last week which aroused sharp reaction in the United States.

Speaking at a dinner given by the British Legion for retiring National Commander Paul Griffith and 135 Legionnaires on a tour of American war cemeteries, the Foreign Secretary reiterated his belief Britain will pull through her current economic crisis.

He referred to Prime Minister Churchill's aside in his famous "we will fight on the beaches" broadcast after Dunkerque, when Churchill said "we will fight them with beer bottles, because that is really all we have got."

"If I may say so, that is how we feel now," Bevin said.

"We ask for no patronage. All we ask for is understanding. Britain is a great bastion in Europe. Western civilization cannot go on if Britain falls, and Britain will not fail."

Russia Warns Iran on Oil Pact

Tehran, Iran, Sept. 10 (AP).—Associates of Prime Minister Ahmed Qavam said today that Soviet Ambassador Sadchikov had told the premier Russia would consider Iran a "bitter blood enemy" if the Soviet-Iran oil agreement is not approved by Parliament.

(Authoritative government sources in London said Sir John le Rougetel, British ambassador in Tehran, was hurrying home for top-level talks on Soviet-Iran relations.)

The informants said the new cabinet and legislative program of the Quavam government were expected to be announced before Parliament Sunday, and that the oil agreement and a proposed 25-million-dollar American military credit would be among the legislative items submitted.

Europe Set to Ask 19 Billions of U. S.

Financial Needs for Next Four Years Expected to Decrease as Progress Is Made

Paris, Sept. 10 (AP).—Western Europe will ask the United States to underwrite a little less than $19,000,000,000 for a four-year program of reconstruction under the Marshall proposal, a well-informed source said tonight.

The source, who is participating in the 16-nation European Economic Conference and requested that his identity not be disclosed, said the total balance-of-payment deficit with the entire world for supplies needed in the years 1948 through 1951 now stands at $19,726,000,000.

This figure, he predicted, will be reduced to below $19,000,000,000 by the conference central committee when it takes up the report of the subcommittee on balances of payment, probably tomorrow.

The source explained the current, tangled balance-of-payment situation in this manner:

Western Europe's four-year deficit with American countries alone will amount to $22,600,000,000. With the rest of the world, excluding the American countries, however, Europe hopes to have a balance-of-payment surplus of $2,874,000,000, which would reduce the deficit to $19,726,000,000.

The total balance-of-payment deficit with the entire world will amount to $8,276,000,000 in 1948, the source said; $6,125,000,000 in 1949; $3,675,000,000 in 1950, and $1,650,000,000 in 1951—the last year of United States aid to Europe under the Marshall proposal.

Jacques Maillet, French spokesman of the subcommittee on manpower, said, meanwhile, that the member states had agreed on a program of exchanging labor between surplus and deficit countries so that Western Europe would need no labor assistance from outside.

Text of Marshall Statement

The text of Secretary of State Marshall's statement yesterday regarding the European economic situation follows:

We have been following carefully the reports of the economic situation of the various European countries.

We see the requirements of these countries as falling into two phases of the program: First, some form of interim assistance to meet the immediate threat of intolerable hunger and cold; and second, the general program rehabilitation of the respective economies.

The nature of the long-term problem of European reconstruction and our attitude toward it remain unchanged. But the short-term problem has become more immediate. Bad droughts, following an unusually severe winter, increasing crop shortages and restrictive financial measures which certain European governments have already been obliged to take, have had serious repercussions and have accelerated the need of some European countries for assistance in reducing hunger and cold this winter.

In these circumstances this phase of the requirements will clearly have to be given our urgent consideration and cannot await the completion of the broader study which the over-all program demands.

We expect that, by the latter part of October, we will have available working papers on the basis of which the appropriate congressional committees could undertake consideration of means to supplement European supplies of food and fuel for the coming winter where it can be shown that every effort has been made locally to meet the critical needs. The majority of the congressional committees visiting Europe will have returned by that time. We hope that shortly thereafter the complete data for the European recovery program can be screened and made available in order that the problem may be faced in its entirety and that any action taken to meet immediate needs may be correlated into the general program.

The question of how the necessary congressional authority is to be obtained must await developments of the next few weeks.

Stopgap Help for Europe Urgent, Marshall Warns

information for him to estimate how much stopgap help would be needed this winter. Such a flood of reports is coming in, he said, and the matter is so complicated and serious, that discussions of the problem would have to be based on a very sound foundation of fact.

He said he had been keeping President Truman informed of developments.

While Secretary Marshall was stressing the urgency of Europe's needs, Secretary Harriman's 19-man committee of nonpartisan business and professional leaders was holding an all-day meeting to discuss what the United States can "safely and wisely" do to help.

The Harriman committee has reached the stage at which the chairman of its subcommittees—for steel, agriculture and other fields—can make preliminary reports on the ability of American factories and farms to meet probable European demands.

No information was isued yesterday, but there will be another meeting today, to be followed by a press conference.

Helicopter Saves Alaskan Trapper Facing Starvation

An Alaskan trapper who became trapped himself when wild animals ate up his food was rescued by helicopter in the Army Air Forces' first rescue mission above the Arctic Circle, it was disclosed yesterday.

The AAF said it. Charles O. Weir of Bloomington, Ind., picked up the stranded trapper August 21 after an 185-mile solo helicopter flight from Ladd Field, Fairbanks, northwest to a remote spot near Bettles, Alaska.

The trapper, George Plucinski, had been flown into the interior by a civilian seaplane. The civilian pilot, according to a prearranged plan, dropped Plucinski's food 20 miles to the north. When Plucinski arrived at the spot, he found foraging animals had eaten the food. The pilot was not scheduled to return for him for weeks.

On a river bank Klucinski fashioned a crude sign—"Get Army!"

Food, Dollar Shortage Make French Economic Plight Cruel

porting food from the Western Hemisphere, mainly the U. S., but France, like England, is running out of dollars. And her manufactured products are not the sort which the U. S. wants to absorb. Besides, at present they are insignificant in volume.

The postwar shortage of food in France is the result of several circumstances. The picture is complicated. Here are some of the factors:

1. The weather. A drought last summer was followed by freezes which destroyed the roots of the winter wheat, France's main cereal crop. Without sufficient mechanization, the farmers were unable to reseed sufficiently to spring wheat.

Besides, the freezes were followed this summer by a drought, apparently the worst in a generation. The potato crop, as well as the grain harvest, was grievously hurt. The wheat coming to market is less than one half of the normal amount.

2. Price control. Partly because of the difficulty of price control under the best of circumstances, and partly because of some mismanagement by the government, the peasants are hoarding their crops, or selling them on the black market. They also find it more profitable, under the present scale of prices to feed wheat to their cattle.

Prices have been set in such a way that meat disappears from the legal market and reappears there in quantity only when the price is lifted up to or approaching that of the black market.

3. Land under cultivation. Because of price control and also because there is not available as much consumer goods as the farmer could afford to buy, he is taking it easy. There is at present somewhere between 20 and 30 per cent less land under cultivation than before the war.

On the industrial side, France's postwar program is better. Much of her industrial equipment, destroyed by the war, has been rebuilt. Despite the loss of large amounts of railroad equipment and the destruction of 2500 bridges, France operates her rail system at almost prewar levels, as a result of energetic work in restoring the transport system.

The Monnet plan for industrial reconstruction progresses, although to be sure, at less than optimum rates.

It depended, in part, for success on stable wages and prices which France was not able to achieve. It also depended on imports of raw materials and industrial equipment. But many of the dollar credits for these were used in part to buy wheat. Now they are gone or very nearly so.

The most severely limiting factor to French industrial production is shortage of coal. Indeed, in Europe almost all economic discussions return persistently to the same refrain—export coal from England. But Britain now mines less than enough to maintain a prosperous industrial economy for itself.

At present, France must buy American coal, laid down in French ports at a cost of about $22 a ton. That is a price too high to permit the rebuilding of a profitable industrial system.

It is agreed almost universally that with more coal, France's industry would take on an entirely different tempo. There is the iron ore and the steel-making capacity to permit a large increase in that basic commodity on which heavy industry depends. The same, incidentally, applies to England.

Another factor limiting French production is manpower. There is a shortage which again seems to be the result of a series of factors.

Price and wage controls have operated in such a way that bartender's assistant, or a self-employed small shopkeeper or barrow mechant (flirting a bit with the black market and illegal money-changing) earns more than a skilled industrial worker.

There has been, therefore, an exodus of workers from industry to trade. Men demobilized from the army have gone into shopkeeping rather than factories. The disproportion of men in commerce to those in industrial labor is greater than normal.

France has tried to import workers from Italy. But industrialists, it is reported, distrust the process, because it has been handled by the Ministry of Immigration, which until recently was Communist-run and still has plenty of fellow-traveling officials. Italian workers are screened by the Confederation Generale du Travaille, the completely Communist-dominated national organization of trade unions. The result is that few Italian anti-Communists are being allowed to immigrate. And industry is not happy with the specimens it gets through this procedure.

There is an apparently well-founded story that the steel industry, through its own sub rosa immigration machinery, has brought in ten times more Italians than the government has supplied through its own procedures.

Industrial productivity—production per-man-power—runs at about 75 to 77 per cent of the prewar rate. This low figure is not due principally to any falling off of effort by the worker. Indeed, it is agreed here on all sides that the individual worker comes close to working with prewar energy. This is the more remarkable when one considers that he gets but one third of a pound of meat and one fifth his normal bread consumption on his ration, and has to rely on the black market for anything more.

The poor productivity showing is more the result of interruption of supplies, lack of raw materials, and absences of critical parts to complete the whole.

The peasant and the trader are best situated economically of the people of France. The former, at least, has enough to eat. His products are in high demand and he can trade them for some consumers' goods which are becoming available. And the trader is profiting in an unstable currency situation.

Those in a bad way are the manual and industrial workers, and the white-collar and government service people.

The latter groups—clerks, petty officials and others in low-paid government and municipal jobs—draw wages which have lagged far behind mounting inflationary prices.

In the French inflation, prices have risen above the prewar figure nine to ten times—plus. The "plus" is for the black market, on which few good statistics are available. Suffice it to say that the "plus" is plenty.

But industrial wages have risen only five to six times above the prewar level. This means that the worker has at best half the income he had before. He is said to be spending 80 per cent of his income on food.

According to government figures, he and each member of his family get about 2500 calories a day, of which three fourths is acquired in the free and black market, and only one fourth on rations and at controlled prices.

(Incidentally, it is surprising to visitors to observe in Government publications casual and commonplace references to the black market, as such, without any attempt to minimize its importance.)

The total cost of a working family's diet is about 335 francs per day per person. An "adequate diet," up to minimum standards of healthy living, would cost about 450 francs per person, an amount the average worker does not have to spend.

One striking example of his costs is wine—"vin ordinaire" which, however, Americans may choose to regard it, was close to a necessity for the French worker. He was accustomed to drink three liters a day. He could do this before the war, for it cost about 1 franc 40 centimes a liter. Now it costs 80 francs a liter.

The worker survives because most large industrial plants serve him one hot nourishing meal a day. Otherwise he could not do heavy work.

Meantime, the hapless chase of wages and prices persists, disrupting the agricultural supply and making life grim for the worker and white collar groups and profitable only to the black marketeer.

Stabilization of the French currency, it goes without saying, is an essential corrective.

Until it comes, the government itself remains deep in budgetary difficulties. An important part of its tax revenue is supposed to come from business transactions, but since so many [illegible] black market [illegible] ernment income.

Enlistment Drop Worries Eisenhower

General Eisenhower yesterday expressed concern over a drop in Army recruiting which has brought its strength to a postwar low.

Despite an intensified drive for volunteers, enlistments fell off in August and the Army dropped to some 965,000 officers and men—10 per cent under the required total.

Eisenhower said that if the decline continues and our postwar military setup gets "shaky," he will go to Congress and put the problem squarely before them.

The Nation—not the War Department—fixed our occupation and other current military roles and decided the Army would be recruited by voluntary methods, he declared.

"It's as much your problem as ours," said "Ike."

The chief of staff said he would consider our position to be "shaky," when manpower had dropped so that:

1. Occupation forces abroad fell below what Gens. Douglas MacArthur and Lucius Clay—commanders in Japan and Germany—consider "safe levels."

2. Air force strength is "cut into" so materially as to cripple this vital arm of defense.

"That's certain to came about if recruiting continues low," he added.

Net Loss Is 25,000

Total enlistments in August were 23-112, which brought the net loss in officers and men for July and August to 25,000. Thirty thousand recruits are needed each month to maintain the Army and the total has been averaging only about 23,000.

Asked what the War Department would recommend as a solution to the problem, Eisenhower recalled that last year he had proposed improving housing and requested authority to spend money appropriated for pay of enlisted men to hire civilians if enough recruits are not forthcoming. Congress did not grant these requests.

He indicated that he would renew these proposals if the Army continues below strength and said he would urge that the WAC be made permanent. This will enable the Army to put more women in jobs they can take over from men.

"Ike" also declared the Army would denew its request for universal military training.

The Army chief commented on these other points:

He was opposed to suggestions that the Army Inspector General be a civilian appointed by the President. Such a step, he said, would indicate a lack of confidence in the chief of staff, and furthermore "a civilian would be more apt to have the wool pulled over his eyes than a military man."

He was confident the Inspector General investigating conditions in Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee's command in Italy would deliver an "unbiased report."

Praises General Bradley

It would be improper to comment on who his successor might be. At another point, he highly praised the ability of Gen. Omar Bradley, now Veterans Administrator.

Living conditions in Alaska are worse than anywhere else in the Army, except Korea. Sooner or later, we must construct proper posts there, despite "fantastically high" building costs, he said.

Some 22,000 troops now in Italy, the Chief of Staff said, and all but 5000 will be withdrawn as soon as possible under the Italy peace treaty settlement. Some of these might be used to strengthen occupation forces in Germany if needed.

Asked about the possibility of America sending troops to Greece, Eisenhower said that "so far we've had no instructions to send troops anywhere." He added he didn't like to specluate on the future.

Va. Welfare Funds To Be Allocated

Richmond, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—New allocations of public welfare funds for Virginia localities will be made as soon as local governments submit new estimates of costs for the fiscal year, Welfare Commisisoner Arthur W. James has announced.

An unexpended balance of probably $150,000 is expected to be available, in addition to an extra $100,000 approved by Governor Tuck as a deficit expenditure.

with rocket-launchers, the Admiral said. He envisaged "half a dozen Kentucky's filled with rockets" teamed up with 8 or 10 carriers as a "very flexible" major naval striking force of the future. (The Kentucky is an unfinished 45,000-ton battleship, which the Navy plans to complete as a guided missile warship).

Sherman said the Navy plans to hold additional rocket-firing tests similar to Saturday's Midway trials but now has no firm schedule for them. He declared that much more information will have to be gained and "great improvements" made in rockets before "we can spend the sort of money necessary to complete the Kentucky."

The Navy chief, who witnessed Saturday's test, declared the V-2 exploded 3 or 4 miles above the ocean and some 6 miles from the Midway. He said it had been set to travel more than 200 miles, and about 75 miles up.

Sherman said the reported explosion was caused by the V-2's fuel igniting, when its controls went out of whack, probebly from defective gyroscopes.

Officials Study Eligibility of O'Daniel's Son

A question s to the eligibility of Pat O'Daniel for appointment as postmaster at Fort Worth, Tex., arose yesterday as Government officials checked provisions of the Civil Service Act.

The son of Senator O'Daniel (D., Tex.) and 18 others are seeking the $8400-a-year life-time job.

A provision of the 1938 Civil Service Law states that applicants for postmasterships in cities the size of Fort Worth must have "actually resided within the delivery of the office to which he is appointed" for one year prior to the closing date by which applications must be filed, in this case September 2.

Pat O'Daniel for some time prior to the latter part of last December (1946) lived here and worked at the now suspended W. Lee O'Daniel News, a weekly political newspaper. He then moved to Texas.

A high Government official, who declined to be identified by name, expressed belief that actual physical residence in the city for the prescribed year is required.

Montgomery County Schools Spill 133 Pupils Into Church

Opening of the 1947-48 school year in Montgomery County yesterday found 133 elementary pupils from two public schools spilling over into nearby church Sunday-school rooms.

As approximately 17,000 children reported at the county's 63 public schools, about 100 second grade and kindergarten pupils of the Woodlin School, Woodside Park, started classes in the Grace Episcopal Church, Silver Spring.

Thirty-three more 5th and 6th grade pupils of Sherwood Elementary, Sandy Spring, began classes at Ashton Friends' Meeting House at Ashton. Some 65 kindergarten tots of the Kensing Elementary will also begin classes in the Kensington Presbyterian Church next week.

Failure to complete school additions now under construction has made use of the church facilities necessary. Acting School Superintendent E. Merritt Douglass said the Ashton Meeting House and the Kensington Presbyterian facilities will probably be used all year. Use of Grace Episcopal Church is expected to last for several months, he said.

Douglas stated the policy may be expanded in other communities "if it seems desirable and there are facilities comparable to those now in use."

Laudick Mentioned for ABC Board

Deputy Rent Control Administrator Louis Laudick is one of several District officials being mentioned as a possible candidate for a vacancy on the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

District Building sources say Laudick will be the first choice of at least one Commissioner when the city heads meet today to discuss candidates.

The vacancy was left August 1 by the death of William P. Meredith.

Action on the appointment may be deferred until next week because Commissioner John Russell Young will not be present at today's meeting. It is understood, however, that Young has already told the other Commissioners his personal choice for the post.

Other District officials mentioned for the ABC job include Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell and J. Thomas Kennedy, superintendent of weights, measures and markets.

Cogswell told The Washington Postyesterday that, despite published reports to the contrary, he is not a candidate for the post and is "definitely not interested in it."

Pulaski, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—Efforts were continued today to obtain a dwelling to house third grade pupils of Fairlawn school in Pulaski County while it was revealed that a literary fund loan may be sought for construction of a modern brick elementary school there in advance of a planned bond issue for general county school improvement.

Meanwhile, patrons of the school withheld threatened legal action to give county school authorities an opportunity to make housing improvements.

Embezzling Banker Denied Md. Pardon

Richmond, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—Willilam Reeves Gardner, former vice president and director of a Fredericksburg bank, who is serving a seven-year penitentiary sentence for embezzlement, has been denied a pardon by the State Board of Pardons and Reprieves, a spokesman said today.

Gardner was sentenced after he withdrew a plea of innocent in his trial on June 20, 1945 and pleaded guilty to larceny and embezzlement of $75,000 from the since liquidated Farmers and Merchants State bank of Fredericksburg.

Gandhi Visits Refugee Camp

New Delhi, India, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—Mohandas K. Gandhi, still weakened by his fast in Calcutta, visited refugee camps in New and Old Delhi today, urging Sikhs, Hindus and Moslems to stop rioting and live as brothers.

Followers of the 77-year-old apostle of peace feared that he might start another hunger strike if riots broke out here again, and that his life would be seriously endangered after his recent 73-hour fast.

Gandhi walked around areas in which perhaps 1000 persons have been killed in three days of savage religious warfare. Thousands of refugees herded around him and thanked him for his peace efforts.

Additional troop reinforcements reached the capital today, including two detachments of an armored corps, to back up the government's "shoot-to-kill" orders against rioters. Women police were recruited to search women passengers in trains for arms.

The "shoot-to-kill" order backfired today when a sentry fired at one of Governor General Earl Mountbatten's government house cars, killing the Eikh driver and wounding Mountbatten's deputy military secretary. Mountbatten's press attache, who was in the car, escaped unhurt. It was believed the sentry fired when those in the car failed to hear an order to halt.

$3,000,000 Fraud Laid to 9 War Firms As GSO Eyes 'Reconversion Settlements'

The General Accounting Office told congressional investigators yesterday that a naircraft manufacturer and at least eight other industrialists defrauded the Government of more than three million dollars in the "reconversion settlement" of their war contracts.

Counsel E. L. Fisher of the GAO said also that it would be very difficult, if not impossible, for the Government to do anything about the situation because of the wording of the 1944 statute under which the settlements were negotiated.

He placed before the House Executive Expenditures Subcommittee, headed by Representative George H. Bender (R., Ohio), a list of nine war contracts in which he said audits had revealed fraudulent overpayments of $3,006,515.

One Firm Got Most

Most of the money—$2,925,689—was fraudulently obtained by one aircraft manufacturer, Fisher said. But he declined to name the manufacturer, explaining that the Justice Department is working on the case.

Bender promptly demanded an investigation of all Government aircraft contracts.

Fisher said the GAO had made no attempt to audit all of the 318,000 war contract settlements because it was waiting to see what success the Justice Department had in prosecuting fraud cases already uncovered.

"It is very difficult to prove fraud," he said.

Unless fraud can be proved, he added, the Government can do nothing to recover excess payments under the terms of the law.

Representative Robert F. Rich (R., Pa.) remarked that Congress was "awfully dumb" to pass a contract settlement law which made it legally impossible for the GAO to recover overpayments. He suggested that the "best thing we can do is to drop this investigation and repeal the contract settlement law."

"We ought to be investigating why Congress passed such a law," he added bitterly.

Representative Porter Hardy (D., Va.) seconded Rich's views.

Bender then scheduled a closed committee session today, to question Justice Department officials on the prosecution of fraud cases.

AFL Union Wants Election Holiday

By The Associated Press

A convention of the ALF International Chemical Workers Union yesterday adopted a resolution proposing that national election day in November, 1948, be a national holiday and pledging to seek defeat of all Congressmen who supported the Taft-Hartley Act.

The union said it would seek repeal of the new law governing labor relations but recommended, meanwhile, "that this law be obeyed as long as it is on the statute books" since it is "now the law of the land."

Leftist Leader Renews Demand That Italian Premier Resign

Rome, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—Left-wing Socialist Leader Pietro Nenni again invited Premier Alcide De Gasperi to resign today, warning De Gasperi and his Christian Democrats to "dismount their horse" before they are "thrown off" by an "implacable opposition."

DeGasperi

Nenni demanded that the government hold immediate debate on his motion of no conference in Italy's non-leftist government.

Parliamentary sources said De Gasperi could stall discussion at least until tomorrow. Most of his rightist backers were in Geneva for the Interparliamentary Conference.

Meanwhile, in northern Italy, the walkout of the one million-member farm workers group continued. Leftists charged that Minister of Interior Mario Scelba had approved the use of strikebreakers, and had ordered police to protect them.

A general strike began in Reggio, Calabria, on the tip of the peninsula, and a general strike was called at Reggio Emilia in the north as an "outraged protest against the vile murder" of a leftist last night.

Peace Pacts To Be Signed Next Monday

London, Sept. 10 (AP).—Formal ratification of the peace treaties with Italy, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Finland will take place Monday in Paris and Moscow, the British Foreign Office said today.

The treaties with the former Axis satellites were signed just seven months ago today, February 10, in Paris. Russia became the last major power to ratify the treaties, announcing the step on August 30.

The Italian treaty will be deposited in the Quai d'Orsay—the French Foreign Office—and the remainder in the Kremlin.

French Offer Self-Rule to Indo Chinese

Saigon, Indo-China, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—French High Commissioner Emile Bollaert today offered full political independence to the three Indo-Chinese states within the framework of a French commonwealth of nations.

Speaking at Haidong, in Tonkin Province, Bollaert emphasized he was speaking on behalf of the French government. He said the French offer must be accepted or rejected as a whole and its acceptance preceded by a cease-fire order on both sides that will halt the bloody 9-month-old war between French and Indo-Chinese Republican forces.

Ramadier Appeals

Paris, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—Premier Paul Ramadier appealed to Indo-China today to unite its own political factions and create a stable government of all parties to negotiate a peace with France.

Ramadier said France would allow the Indo-Chinese full freedom to decide on the kind of government they wanted.

He said France would continue to direct foreign policy for the whole French Union, including Indo-China, and would be responsible for defense in the case of foreign aggression.

the District. Eighty-five per cent of 2699 wage violators consisted of "failure to comply with the record-keeping and posting requirements of the wage orders and hours law," the board observed.

The board also reported it had:

1. Revised the minimum wage order for the laundry, dry cleaning and dyeing industry, raising the minimum wage for a standard week's work from $14.50 to $22 per week.

2. Boosted the minimum wage for the retail trade industry from $17 to $25 for a normal work week.

3. Held hearings on a proposed new safety code for window-washers. (This wis subsequently adopted August 15 to go into effect October 16. But it was not included in the fiscal 1947 report.

4. Began a study of wages, hours and working conditions in the beauty culture occupation.

Minimum wage violations brought fines amounting to $2390 in 35 of the 45 cases taken to criminal court. Twenty-two persons were prosecuted for industrial safety violations. Nine of the number were convicted and paid $335 in fines.

Sunday Movies Favored

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 10.—Senior English classes of Martinsburg High School voted 71 to 31 in favor of Sunday showing of motion pictures. The issue was submitted to student vote yesterday without advance notice by John Knipe, instructor, prompted by a discussion of the subject by the City Council here.

Syria Sheiks See Bloodshed in U. N. Partitioning Proposal

Damascus, Syria, Sept. 10 (AP).—A conference of 52 sheiks representing every tribe in Syria was disclosed today to have taken the stand that partition of Palestine would "stimulate Arabs to liberate her finally by arms and red blood."

A message sent by the conference at Palmyra two days ago to the United Nations and President Al Sayed Shukri Al Kuwatly of Syria declared "to the whole world that Palestine is an indivisible part of our great Arab home" and that they would "accept no other solution of her case than complete liberty and independence within Arab League bounds."

A friend of Mrs. Heady and her husband—Henry Bruckspen of St. Joseph, Mo.—offered them the use of the small house, built for Bruckspen's 6-year-old daughter, Stacia. Higher Fares for Commuters Won, Freight Hike Denied

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday granted eastern railroads a 15 to 25 percent increase in commuter fares but refused to authorize an immediate 10 percent hike in freight rates.

Sixteen roads affected by the raise in commuter fares can put them into effect after five days notice to the public. They are:

The Pennsylvania; Baltimore and Ohio; New Haven; New York Central; Boston and Albany; Pittsburgh and Lake Erie; Lehigh Valley; Delaware, Lackawanna and Western; Erie; New York, Susquehanna and Western; Jersey Central; Long Island; Reading; Pennsylvania-Reading Seashore Line; Chicago, South Shore and South Bend, and the Boston and Maine.

On fares to and from Washington, Philadelphia, Youngstown, O., and Chicago, the 50-and 54-trip monthly fares were changed to an unlimited type and increased by a flat $2.50.

The ICC order applies to interstate fares only. Increased general passenger and Pullman fares already had been granted.

In turning down the plea of the Nation's rail carriers for an immediate 10 per cent freight rate increase pending hearings on an average 27 per cent hike, Commissioner Clyde B. Aitcheson said the interim raise could not be granted without adequate hearings. It had been opposed by representatives of shippers during hearings yesterday and Tuesday.

Aitcheson said the commission would "take under advisement" a request of shippers that a recess be called to give them time to prepare their case. Pending decision on a recess the roads continued their arguments.

Jacob Aronson, chief counsel for the roads, charged the shippers with attempting to "waste time" in seeking a delay. The need of the railroads was so obvious, he said, on the bsis of recent rises in wages and material costs, that increased rates should be ordered now.

Aitchison retorted that the commission was listening to the roads' case but that it intended to hear the opposition before making a decision.

The shippers asked that the hearings be split into two full-scale sessions: one on the 10 per cent raise and the other on the 27 per cent increase. Then they asked for a week's recess at the conclusion of railroad testimony to enable them to prepare their case.

After completion of the 10 per cent hearing, they asked that a considerably longer recess be granted, probably of 30 to 90 days, to permit them to prepare answers to arguments for the higher and permanent increase.

Aitcheson also had occasion to remind the shippers that the commission intended giving both sides a hearing. Walter McDonald of the Georgia Public Service Commission requested on behalf of 20 State commissions that hearings be held elsewhere, contending that 'shipping interests are up in the air."

"We'd like to have our own mind settled, too," Aitcheson replied. "We are now hearing the railroads' testimony and their first witness is still on the sand. Let's see what develops here. We desire to hear both sides."

Man Accused of Killing Another With Truck

St. Louis Paper Defies Ban On News Mentioning Lottery

St. Louis, Sept. 10 (AP).—The St. Louis Star-Times, advised that it was in violation of the postal fraud and lottery law for publishing last July a dispatch about a North Carolina Negro who was first denied an automobile he won in a lottery, said today in an editorial it would continue to publish all such stories.

Postmaster Bernard F. Dickmann of St. Louis said in a letter to the newspaper that the Star-Times and Time, Life and Newsweek magazines had violated the statute and that had the story been noticed at the time, it would have been barred from the mails.

"It is not a free press when any public agency attempts to tell a newspaper that it cannot inform the public of discrimination against a Negro because of his race," the editorial stated.

(In Baltimore, executives of the Sun papers received from Postmaster Neal A. Sibley today a letter citing publication in the Sun of an August 18 dispatch from Peoria, Ill., telling of a drawing for a house conducted by the city of Peoria. Sibley said the item had been called to his attention by the solicitor of the Postoffice Department in Washington and the Sun was "cautioned against depositing such matter in the mails in the future."

(And in Washington, Postoffice Department officials described the lottery warnings as "routine." They said there is no campaign on against papers carrying such stories.

Joined by an unidentified man, Pistone pursued Herring to the 1400 block of Park rd., where, they said, he "grabbed" at another woman.

Ruhr Mines Agreement

spection in the farming areas to compel farmers to send their food to the cities.

"We have considered," the final report said, "how far German production could be increased by the introduction into the Ruhr of American mining machinery.

"After taking expert advice we have reached the conclusion that, having regard to the natural conditions in the Ruhr coal field, the methods so successfully employed in the mining of coal in the United States are not immediately applicable."

However, the report urged that American coal experts make an engineering study of the Ruhr mines as soon as possible, in the hope that American technical experience might be useful in the Ruhr at some later time.

Disagree on Nationalization

The conference did not pretend to reach a decision on the issue of nationalization versus private ownership of the Ruhr mines.

The recent American directive to General Lucius D. Clay, the American commander, instructed him not to interfere with socialization if the Germans showed by democratic methods that they wanted it. It left him free, however, to preach the advantages of free enterprise, which he has been doing vigorously during the past year.

This formula may be the basis of eventual American-British agreement at what are called "higher levels." In other words, the two governments may agree not to obstruct socialization if the Germans want it, although the British propaganda agencies in Germany might urge a Socialist solution and the Americans the reverse.

Production Spurred

The greatest effect of yesterday's agreement may be, as one of the negotiators put it privately, to spur the military commanders to greater efforts in the production of coal.

The mere fact of the conference in Washington may have had an effect on coal production, for output in the first week of September has been running above 240,000 tons a day. On one day, September 5, a postwar record of 244,000 tons was mined in the Ruhr, compared to 220,000 tons only a few weeks ago.

The target for January 1 of next year is 300,000 tons a day. Undersecretary of War William H. Draper yesterday put the goal for the end of 1948 at 400,000, although he conceded that it might be too optimistic.

Other Recommendations

Other recommendations made by the conference included:

(1) The greater use of Dutch and Belgian ports for bringing food supplies into the Ruhr and the rest of western Germany;

(2) The immediate import of about 25 million dollars worth of steel equipment and mining machinery—to be paid for out of German exports—to help the Ruhr coal industry to recover;

(3) The continuance of recruiting for mine labor in all parts of the combined zone; and

(4) The greater use of motor trucks to transport Ruhr coal in view of the deterioration of German railroads.

Transport Study Urged

The conference also urged the American and British zone commanders to work out a long-term program for rehabilitating the German coal industry; to start a detailed study of the transport problems in the bizonal area; to consider an immediate increase in coal prices, and to make greater use of German resources for recovery.

Coke Accord Reported

Berlin, Sept. 10 (AP).—Reliable informants said today agreement had been reached in the three-power coal negotiations here for an increased allocation of German coke to France.

Fire Prevention Week Begins Oct. 5

The Commissioners yesterday designated the week beginning October 5 as "Fire Prevention Week" here and urged District residents "to eliminate all possible causes of fire in their homes and places of business."

Churches, schools, business and civic organizations, and the radio and motion picture industries were also called upon to "cooperate fully" in the observance of Fire Prevention Week.

British Strive for Army Cut, Peace in Coal Mine Strike food shipments to Britain, a Board of Trade spokesman disclosed today, according to the United Press, apparently because Britain suspended the clause of the American loan under which Argentina could be paid for its food in American dollars.)

Meanwhile a "face-saving" solution appeared in prospect in Britain's coal strike.

A National Union of Mine Workers' official proposed that the Grimethorpe miners go back to work to prevent further deterioration of the pit and restore "normal conditions."

Mine Compromise Seen

Leadings collierymen said the announcement was "a way out of the deadlock," because the miners could go back to work, but not at digging coal, without violating their pledge not to resume production until the union and the National Coal Board rescinded an order for them to work a larger daily "stint."

At the same time a special committee appointed by the union and the board could begin investigating the diggers' complaints, without violating their undertaking not to do so until work was resumed.

The walkout of the Grimethorpe men at one time involved sympathy walkouts at about 50 pits and 60,000 miners and has cost Britain 450,000 tons of coal. About 38 pits and 40,000 men were affected today.

Cut in Armed Forces

Defense Minister A. V. Alexander conferred with the ministers of War, Navy and Air on plans to cut Britain's armed forces below the 1,007,000 figure set by Prime Minister Attlee for the end of next March. The forces now total 1,300,000. A highly placed source said the cut involved no revision in "strategic concepts."

John W. Snyder, United States Secretary of the Treasury, conferred with Hugh Dalton, chancellor of the exchequer. A government source said it was a "safe assumption" that Dalton asked about the possibility of releasing the 400 million dollars frozen portion of the $3,750,000,000 loan.

Attlee wrote to the Cinematograph Association today that the government was willing to consider some "alternative action" to its recent 75 per cent tax on Hollywood film earnings here. The tax resulted in Hollywood producers banning export of films to England.

Commissioners Study Bus Case

Charges of assault with intent to kill lodged against Sherman G. Buis, 36, of the Dorchester House, yesterday were taken under advisement by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and the case continued until tomorrow.

Buis is accused of shooting Army Pvt. William R. Hall in the stomach following a scuffle at Buis' apartment last August.

According to police, Hall asserted made improper advances to him and that he then hit Buis.

Police said that Buis held a gun on Hall to prevent him from making off with some costume jewelry and then called headquarters. In the ensuing scuffle Hall was wounded.

"One problem bothers me," Turnage said. "That is what distinction there is in shooting in self defense and shooting in defense of property.

Wainwright Groomed To Defeat O'Daniel

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 10 (AP).—The Dallas Morning News says a movement is under way to draft Gen. Jonathan Wainwright as a Democratic candidate for the United States Senate next year, to oppose the renomination of Senator W. Lee O'Daniel.

Wainwright retired as commander of the Fourth Army last month and became an executive of a food store chain at San Antonio.

The News says the movement is headed by W. H. Reid, Dallas attorney, who "believes Wainright would have the political glamour to defeat O'Daniel."

Doctors Say Sailor Drowned in River

The death of a sailor on leave from the Naval Torpedo Test Station, Piney Point, Md., whose body was found in the Potomac River Tuesday, was attributed to drowning last night by doctors at the Bethesda Naval Medical Center.

The victim, Walter George Greulich, fireman first class, died from "submersion in water," the physicians said, but they did not elaborate on their verdict.

Neptune Plans to Give Truman 'The Works' at Equatorial Rites

By A Post Reporter

Athens, Greece (By Submarine). Neptune Rex, ruler of the seven seas, is reliably reported to have left his palace at the bottom of the Aegean Sea, to board the United States Battleship Missouri in the South Atlantic tonight.

His Majesty's mission, authoritative sources said, has nothing to do with the current crisis here. Rather, the ancient Greek god of the sea plans to personally welcome United States President Harry S. Truman and other distinguished "polliwogs" to be "shellbacks" of his court when the warship "crosses the line."

Davy Jones, Her Highness Amphitrite and the Royal initiation team—including the Royal Barber, Royal Dentist and the Bears—accompany Neptune to see that the ancient initiation ceremonies are carried off in traditional style.

Ceremony Is Old

From time immemorial, landlubbers have become true "shellbacks" only when they cross the Equator and are fittingly received by King Neptune and his court.

President Truman, Mrs. Truman and Margaret Truman will be no exceptions.

Neptunus refused to discuss what initiation plans he has in store for them.

But here is what the usual "polliwog" must g othrough before admission to Neptune's court:

Charges are Preferred

Davy Jones boards the ship in mid-ocean the night before the vessel is to cross the line. He is welcomed by her skipper, invariably a shellback, who gives him the names of the polliwogs aboard. Charges are then preferred against them (FDR was accused of gross negligence in not carrying Maine and Vermont) and the culprits are dragged before the court.

Great preparations are made before the ship crosses the line. A tank usually is erected on deck and filled with salt water and heavy fuel oil.

The "polliwogs" at the appointed time are dragged before Neptunus (usually the senior "shellback" abord). Beside him is Amphitrite—normally a good-looking seaman who appears in a skirt of seaweed and long rope hair.

Victims Are Punished

Devils—sometimes with electric pitchforks—prod the victims forward. The charges are read, and the King pronounces punishment. Sometimes the Royal Barber shears the "polliwog's" head with huge shears. The Royal dentist makes a great play at pulling teeth with great tongs. The Royal doctor feeds them pills, and then they "are thrown to the bears."

This means a ducking in the tank, and usually a paddling on wet trousers. Then—and only then—the landlubber becomes a "shellback" and receives a certificate from the King.

Emergency Dulls Fun On Missouri

By Frank L. Dennis
Post Reporter

Aboard Battleship Missouri, Sept. 10.—A matter of life and death interrupted the fun-making aboard Missouri this afternoon.

As President Truman watched from an open bridge high above deck a doctor and a medical corpsman were transferred by bosuns chairs across 30 yards of bright blue water to a destroyer keeping an exact 12-knot pace.

After the transfer the destroyer turned to dash to the aid of a seaman aboard the United States freighter Del Sol, with which it expects to rendezvous tonight about 7, about 10 miles off Cape Bacoparz, Brazil.

The seaman whose name was not known aboard the Missouri is reported to have blood poisoning.

Shooting a line across the destroyer's bow, hauling a 4-inch hawser aboard, rigging the chair and transferring the two men drew intent interest of Mr. and Mrs. Truman and Margaret and won a "well-done" pennant from the skipper of the Missouri. Skipper of the Small is Cmdr. William R. Barnes.

When the call for help came the off-duty personnel of the Missouri was dressed in odd costumes, playing pranks, incidental to the Equator-crossing ceremonies.

Tonight and tomorrow morning initiation ceremonies will occur, specifications against Mr. Truman include that he sent the Missouri south across Equator without Neptune's permission, also of practicing party politics in Neptune's domain, aggravated by being democratic.

If Stomach Gas or Sour Food Taste Robs You of Sleep
Here's How You May Help, Whether You Eat 500 Pounds or 2000 Pounds of Food In a Year
You can't feel cheerful, be happy and sleep well, if your stomach is always upset. As age advances the "old stomach" needs more help. The reason is this:
Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.
To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that 888 Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the 888 Tonic formula which contains very special and potent activating ingredients.
Also, 888 Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.
Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is 888 Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people 888 Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of 888 Tonic from your drug store today. 888 Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

U. S. Seeking Atom Rule, Gromyko Says

American Delegate Calls Russian Charge 'False'; Proposal Appears Stalled

Lake Success, Sept. 10 (AP).—Russia charged today that the United States is attempting to create a world atomic trust and dictate its atomic will on all nations. The United States denied the accusation as "false."

For 35 minutes Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet delegate, hurled charge after charge against the United States in the bitterest speech yet heard in any United Nations atomic energy organization.

He rejected the second report of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission, which was up for final action, as "completely inacceptable." He said the United States was trying to "undermine" attempts to achieve unanimous agreement on atomic control while at the same time voicing "highsounding" phrases for harnessing the atom.

The commission adjourned until tomorrow without a vote on the report.

Called 'Old Stuff'

In a statement to newsmen, the United States representative, Frederick H. Osborn called the Soviet accusations, in effect, "old stuff."

Osborn said:

"The accusations made by Mr. Gromkyo were in my opinion false.

"False statements are not made true by their repetition and this repetition has been going on for the past 12 months.

A careful perusal of the records of the meetings of the commission and its committees will reveal the intense and active cooperation of the representatives of 10 and even 11 nations in the development of the proposals now before the commission.

"That record speaks for itself and anyone interested in the facts can read it and draw his own conclusions."

A United States spokesman said Osborn would ignore the Russian speech tomorrow in his comment on the report.

Majority Approve

Occasion of the Russian attack on the United States position and motives was consideration of a report setting forth principles involved in creating and operating an international atomic energy control system.

A majority of 10 delegates have indicated approval.

In view of Gromyko's latest statement delegates said it was certain Russia and Poland would vote against it. The commission hopes to complete action tomorrow.

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 10 (U.P.). The United Nations debate of the Anglo-Egyptian dispute ended in a temporary victory for Britain tonight when the 11 nations of the Security Council failed once more to agree on a solution.

With no other possibilities of a settlement in sight, the Council turned down China's proposal for asking Egypt and Britain to resume private negotiations of their differences while the U. N. kept a watchful eye on progress.

The result was complete failure of the Egyptian government's plea for the immediate withdrawal of all British troops from the Nile Valley and termination of the predominantly British rule of the Sudan.

Sophoulis Gets 279-to-2 Vote Of Confidence

Athens, Greece, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—The Greek Parliament tonight gave the coalition government of Liberal Premier Themistocles Sophoulis an almost unanimous vote of confidence, assuring his guerilla amnesty bill of speedy passage. The vote was 279 to 2.

The bill, expected to become law within a few days, gives the guerillas one month to turn in their arms and suspends all death sentences passed against them or their supporters by the military courts.

It was dissatisfaction with the government's policy toward guerillas which caused three cabinet ministers to resign, toppling the rightist government of Premier Demetrios Maximos August 23.

Five members of the central committee of the left-wing EAM coalition went on trial today before a court of appeals of five judges on charges of publishing guerilla communiques.

The five also are charged with printing remarks allegedly insulting to Dwight Griswold, head of the American mission on aid to Greece, as "the official representative of a foreign country."

Chiang Orders Housecleaning of Government

Nanking, China, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—A program calling for a government purge of "undesirable and corrupt" persons within the Kuomintang will be submitted today or tomorrow to a joint session of the Kuomintang and San Min Chu youth corps, a reliable source reported.

The program was said to have been ordered by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who has urged Kuomintang leaders to "clean our house" of corruption.

In a written message, Chiang reportedly acknowledged that China's present economic ills were due "mainly to our own mistakes in dealing with the economic situation." He admitted the Communists have an edge over the government in organization, discipline and propaganda.

The new "purge committee" arrested five government officials in North China on charges including embezzlement, misappropriation and abuse of official privileges.

Political observers believed the crackdown was a direct result of Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer's statement on completion of his investigation of China.

The charge was 80 yen ($1.60).

Dismissal Hoax Sends 1212 Pupils Home for Day

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Sept. 10 (AP). Franklin High School's 1212 students got an unauthorized vacation today when an anonymous woman telephoned the school office representing herself as calling from the board of education and directing that school be dismissed.

The same caller apparently notified the school bus barns for they arrived at the school shortly after the students had been released.

The hoax was thought to have grown out of yesterday's 15-minute early dismissal because of the 98-degree heat.

GOP Leaders Hail Pa. Victory As Preview of Result in 1948

Republican leaders, who have been disturbed lately by talk of a Democratic comeback, yesterday rejoiced over a GOP victory in Pennsylvania's eighth congressional district Tuesday.

Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said the triumph of 37-year-old Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, who won the House seat by a landslide, was a signal that the American voters will throw out the Truman Administration in '48.

Democratic leaders made little effort to hide their disappointment. They had hardly expected their candidate, Phil Storch, to win, but they did hope his vote would show a percentage gain over other elections in the Republican stronghold.

Big GOP Margin

Actually, Lichtenwalter got a bigger margin of victory than his Republican predecessor, the late Representative Charles J. Gerlach, did in the five times he was named. Lichtenwalter, speaker of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, will fill Gerlach's unexpired term.

Complete returns in the special election in Pennsylvania showed that Lichtenwalter beat Storch by 47,780 to 30,178. Total registration was 73,000 Republicans and 46,000 Democrats.

Republican Chairman Reece pointed out that Lichtenwalter's total vote was something in excess of 61 per cent, as compared with the late Representative Gerlach's 58.9 per cent in the 1946 election.

Reece said:

"The PAC and its assorted fellow travelers sought this test of the public's appraisal of the record of the Republican Congress and they got it. Probably they will learn nothing from the result, but it is most enlightening to the American people."

'Smashing Rebuke'

G. Mason Owlett, Republican National Committman from Pennsylvania, said that Lichtenwalter's victory was a "smashing rebuke" to radical labor bosses, who chose to make the Taft-Hartley bill the paramount issue.

Owlett said also that it was an "inglorious rout" of CIO "carpetbaggers" who assumed control of the campaign of Storch, president of the CIO Lehigh Valley Newspaper Guild.

Representative Leonard W. Hall of New York, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, said the Pennsylvania outcome showed that voters are not being fooled by the CIO campaign of villification. He said the victory was "a preview of Republican success in 1948."

Gael Sullivan, executive director of the Democratic National Committee, wired Storch that his defeat was not surprising. He congratulated Storch on the fight he had put up against "overwhelming financial odds in a district historically Republican."

"The Grundy machine, with its controlled press and powerful organization was too much—this time," Sullivan said.

Zoning Pleas Are Heard in Montgomery

Applications for apartment house rezonings, including construction of more than 2000 units at a cost of more than 20 million dollars, yesterday highlighted public hearings held by the Montgomery County commissioners.

The hearings started yesterday morning and a total of 21 petitions were heard through the day and late into last night. All of them were taken under advisement.

Biggest proposed apartment project is slated for the 92-acre Rapley tract bounded by the Prince Georges County line on the east and Piney Branch rd. on the south.

Third for Same Tract

The application was the third for the same tract in a little over a year. It had been turned down twice by the county commisisoners and consistently disapproved by the Park and Planning Commission.

Backers of the project said it is proposed to build 1500 units in a garden type development. They would not estimate the cost but similar projects proposed in Montgomery have been estimated at between 10 and 15 million dollars.

Apartment house classification was asked for a 30-acre tract owned by J. R. and M. M. Clark and situated on the west side of New Hampshire ave. extended, opposite the Naval Ordnance Laboratory. A four million dollar project of 400 units is planned.

Plan Shopping Center

An application by the same owners for rezoning to shopping center classification of a five-acre tract at White Oak was also heard. They said the project would cost $2,500,000.

A third request for apartment rezoning was filed by the owners of a 20-acre tract adjoining the Sligo Creek Pkwy. just west of Colesville rd.

Czech Cabinet Death Plot Fails

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—Three cabinet ministers escaped an assassination plot today when explosive packages addressed to them were detected before delivery, Minister of Industry Bohumil Lausman announced.

They were Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk, who is to leave Saturday for the United Nations General Assembly session in New York; Deputy Premier Petr Zenke, and Minister of Justice Prokop Drtina.

All three are close to President Eduard Benes, who stated recently that Czechoslovakia, while looking toward Russia for "protection," was tied economically and culturally to the West.

'Ike' Dodges Commitment

Governor Landon's letter to Columnist Moley.

The General said that he didn't know Landon very well, having met him only once and then at a place where there were a lot of other people. He said that they had a good many mutual friends but that he didn't know what Landon's ideas were.

He then went on to tell the reporters that he had tried to keep his mouth shut, that he had repeatedly said that he only wanted to be a soldier, and then, after leaving the Army, to do something else.

Doesn't Want Anything Else

This obviously was a reference to his prospective post as president of Columbia University, which he expects to assume late this winter or early in the spring.

"I honestly don't want to do anything else," General Eisenhower said.

He was then asked about Roy Roberts' article in the Kansas City Star, saying that he would accept an "honest-to-God draft."

It was at this point that a reporter asked the General bluntly whether he would run if nominated.

Ike said that as he recalled it, the Roberts article pointed out that it was impossible to draft a man without that man's encouragement—without some conniving in advance.

Won't Connive

"I assure you," General Eisenhower said, "that I will not be a party to such conniving."

He said that he had a lot of friends in both the Republican and Democratic Parties, and he added that he wanted to keep them.

"I don't see why I have to answer such a hypothetical question," the General said, referring back to the matter of running in case he were nominated. "Ever since the time of George Washington, the boys who have been President have been willing to serve."

He said he didn't se why he had to cross a bridge before he came to it.

No Use Answering

He added, "if I ask you what you would do if you were flying to the moon, and half way up you met a friend who was flying to the moon, and he asked you what you were doing there—why, you'd say that was all impossible, so what the hell.

"Since we agree that the thing is impossible, there's no use answering the question."

Former Governor Landon, in his letter to Moley, said that General Eisenhower had a "keen knowledge of politics." He put it this way:

"Despite the fact that he has never held political office, no man could have risen as high as General Eisenhower in the Army without three attributes which any successful President must have:

Not Near Nomination

"First, leadership; second, administrative ability, and, third, a keen knowledge of politics. . . ."

Landon ended his letter by saying that General Eisenhower, at the moment, "is a long way from the nomination." He said that the delegates would want to know how he stood on various issues, whether his sympathies were to the left of center, center, or to the right. They would also want to know, he said, how "Ike" would regard party organization. Other questions were, he said, whether "Ike" would be a winner and whether the American people would respond to his leadership.

Employment Office Described As Labor Market's Barometer

A community's employment office must become like a weather bureau —"a barometer of the current condition of the labor market," Louis Levine, chief of the reports and analysis division of the United States Employment Service, declared yesterday.

Levine, speaking before the third session of the educational institute on "Employment Security" at American University, said the task of the local employment office is far more than mere routine handling of job applicants.

Objectives Outlined

"It is concerned with the broad development of an orderly and smooth functioning labor market," he said. Its objectives, he added, are to increase employment, reduce labor turnover, and shorten the elapsing between jobs.

Levine pointed out that public support is a prime necessity in the efficient functioning of employment offices.

The 50-odd delegates to the institute, all professional employment security workers of North and South Carolina, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and Pennsylvania, also were addressed by Labor Economist Thomas Hitch, of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Truman Proposals Reviewed

Hitch reviewed President Truman's recommendations to Congress in the January and July economic reports, and described the methods by which economic policies are made.

Other speakers were Stuart Morrison, of Social Security's bureau of employment security, whose topic was "Administering Unemployment Insurance at the Local Level," and Walter Erb, of the farm placement division of the United States Employment Service. Erb spoke on "Security for the Farm Worker."

Today's institute activities get under way at 9:30 a. m. Speeches are scheduled by Government, Chamber of Commerce, labor union and airline officials on the general topic of employment and employment security.

Beitscher, Top CIO Official Here, Says He'll Defy Loyalty Probe

Henry Beitscher, boss man of the CIO in Washington, announced yesterday that he will defy the FBI's new loyalty questionnaire.

The FBI, the Civil Service Commission and th eDepartment of Commerce, where Beitscher is employed, all disclaimed responsibility for making Beitscher answer the questions.

Beitscher, who is a member of local 3, United Public Workers (CIO), and president of the Washington Industrial Union Council (CIO), said he would refuse to list his union affiliation in response to question 11 of the loyalty questionnaire.

Regarded as Test Case

His labor affiliations are hardly secret, but the UPW said Beitscher's is regarded as a test case by the union to force a specific ruling on the question of listing union affiliations. Other members of the union have been advised to list their union affiliation.

Just how the test will come remained hazy yesterday after the FBI, Civil Service and the Commerce Department were asked to comment on Beitscher's announcement.

Civil Service said: "No comment."

Commerce said: "It's up to the FBI."

The FBI said: "We are using the questionnaires for identification purposes. The responsibility for getting them filled rests with the employing agency and Civil Service."

One source pointed out that it was possible the Government would ignore Beitscher's failure to list his union affiliation which would bring the union's efforts to make a test of his case to naught.

Question 11 Denounced

Question 11 has been denounced as "union-busting" by CIO Vice President Allen Haywood and the UPW.

Said Beitscher yesterday:

"Actually the only effect of the question will be to give all supervisors a blacklist of union members and would intimidate non-union members from joining the union by giving them the impression that union membership has something to do with loyalty."

According to the UPW, Beitscher's character and loyalty to the United States were affirmed in a previous report made to Commerce by Civil Service.

Colored Currency

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers' proposal to have a different color for each denomination of currency bills is attracting a great deal of attention. Although some commentators consider the idea a joke, we think it is worthy of serious consideration. Time was when the average American had a thin pocketbook and was not likely to mistake a $1 bill for a $5 or a $10, even if his eyesight was none too good. But today millions of Americans are going about with their pockets bulging with currency. They do not always know just how much they are carrying, and in any case they are often compelled to hand out bills when once quarters and 50-cent pieces would have served their purpose. In short, we think that Mrs. Rogers' plan for a currency of many colors will meet with a responsive reception, largely because we are living in an age of inflated wages, salaries and prices.

Furthermore, a good many people who in former days would have carried a minimum amount of cash and paid their bills with checks are today without checking accounts. That alone results in an expansion of cash transactions and greater use of bills of large as well as small denominations. We use different colors to distinguish the denominations of postage stamps. So why not, as Mrs. Rogers urges, introduce a little protective variety into our currency and save a good deal of money for hurried, careless or shortsighted spenders?

Editorials On The Air

Diversity is the fountainhead of American freedom. For the germination of our ideas, we look to conflict. And we hold still to the theory enunciated by John Milton: "Let Truth and Falsehood grapple: who ever knew Truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter?" The problem is to keep the encounter free and open. If the avenues to men's minds are controlled by special interests or transmit only a single point of view, the necessary encounter is avoided. This is why truth flourishes in direct ratio to the vitality and variety of competition in the dissemination of ideas.

Competition in the field of radio, a primary medium of communication, has been limited by certain physical conditions. A broadcasting station must have the exclusive use at a given time and in a given area of a radio frequency. And since the supply of frequencies has been far less than the demand for them, the Government has been obliged to allocate them in accordance with standards of public interest, convenience and necessity. It was because the granting of a license to use a radio frequency was a special privilege that the Federal Communications Commission was justified in insisting that the licensee present conflicting points of view, especially in respect of political issues, impartially. "The broadcaster," the agency declared, "cannot be an advocate."

But new developments in electronics have vastly expanded the radio spectrum. In the two years since the end of the war, the FCC has issued as many licenses for new stations as it issued during the whole of the preceding decade. Frequency modulation is making many additional channels available. Television is beginning to add still more. It is not yet true that the supply of frequencies exceeds the demand—at least in some of the large communities where broadcasting is most profitable. But that time seems certain to come—no doubt soon. And it is in anticipation of it that the FCC has announced that it will hold hearings in January to determine whether its policy forbidding broadcasters to be advocates should be changed.

Of course, when every applicant for a radio license can be granted one, the role of the FCC will be greatly simplified. It will stand in relation to broadcasters in much the position of the Postoffice Department in relation to newspaper publishers; licenses, like second-class mailing privileges, can be extended automatically to all who meet certain simple standards of decency. And in that happy time, broadcasters, we think, should be quite as free as publishers to advocate any cause or candidate they favor. Radio stations are already nearly as numerous as daily newspapers. Their numbers ought to assure that diversity which is the best possible protection of the public interest. We fancy, in any case, that the development of editorial opinion on the air ought to come gradually—that it has been coming gradually for a long time and is already far advanced. Broadcasters need not be too impatient for complete freedom. Their concern must be to use it well.

Marshall's Statement

Senator Flanders recently expressed the hope that crisis legislation could be avoided. The trouble is that men's minds, let alone the processes of representative government, are apt to lag behind the tempo of events. It should have been obvious when Congress adjourned that the economic distress in western Europe was degenerating at such a fast clip that a call for action would be forthcoming by the fall. The facts now bear out this view. The first indication that they had made an impression upon the State Department came from Undersecretary Lovett during the absence in Rio of Secretary Marshall. "It is later than you think," he told the newspaper correspondents. Now Mr. Marshall has come to the same conclusion, and in his statement yesterday threw out a hint that as soon as the President gets back to Washington he will find on his desk a Marshall recommendation that a special session be called.

Secretary Marshall differentiates between the emergency need in Europe and the long-term need for a plan to reestablish what at Harvard he called a "working economy" for Europe. This latter, which Secretary Marshall calls in capital letters (in an effort, perhaps, to get rid of the description, Marshall Plan) the European Recovery Program, cannot possibly be ready before next spring. But long before that time France and Italy, and possibly Britain, will be totally denuded of dollars wherewith to buy our American wheat. And this is what western Europe needs as never before. "Bad droughts, following an unusually severe winter, increasing crop shortages, and restrictive financial measures which certain European governments have already been obliged to take," says Secretary Marshall, "have had serious repercussions and have accelerated the need of some European countries for assistance in reducing hunger and cold this winter." Take, for example, France. The roots of the wheat froze in the severe winter, and more than 40 per cent was lost. This means that, with the added prudence of the French peasant over marketing, the French consumer will get less than half of his wheat requirements from French soil. Much the same condition faces other countries.

It takes no prophet to imagine what would be entailed by a stoppage of food imports in making up this deficiency. There would be social chaos, and, in the precarious condition of present-day politics in western Europe, this in turn would breed a likelihood of political overturns in favor of the Communists. It is, of course, in our national interest, political and economic, to do our utmost to prevent any such catastrophe. We eschew any consideration of the problem in humanitarian terms. But we know that if this call came from the visibly starving (as it would come if present aid were denied), there would be one answer, if history is any guide. America has never been found wanting when a cry for help arises from people afflicted by such natural catastrophes as overtook western Europe last winter.

However, if we wait for the need to stare us so blankly in the face that we could not turn aside, much of our bumper wheat crop will have gone into the bellies of our livestock. Corn in America is short this season, and, in consequence, the price is high. These are the conditions that make for the diversion of wheat into meat, and they can be avoided only by prompt steps on the part of the President to regain allocation powers. That is what makes a special session imperative, no less than the requirements of emergency aid for Europe. To be sure, there are human as well as natural causes accounting for the economic crisis in western Europe. Farm production undoubtedly has not been encouraged, at least in France, by the fantastic system of price controls. But internal measures of self-help are part of the European Recovery Program as this country sees it, and this country should insist upon them as the price of emergency, let alone of long-term, aid.

Economic Fatalists

In an address before a group of businessmen, Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Co. and chairman of the Committee for Economic Development, urged them to join the latter organization for the purpose of combating the dangerous idea that a great depression will inevitably overtake us in the early fifties. There is no rational basis for believing that because the country has suffered periodically from catastrophic depressions, these are indubitably bound to recur. As a matter of fact, the more we know about the history of business cycles, the more certain it becomes that there is no predictable, automatic repetition of business cycles—certainly nothing in the past to warrant a fatalistic attitude toward the future and passive acceptance of the blows dealt by a malign conjunction of adverse economic factors.

This kind of attitude, Mr. Hoffman realizes, is capable of turning a moderate business recession—which is only to be expected after a postwar boom—into a major depression that feeds on itself. The businessman who takes alarm prematurely, cuts orders in preparation for the feared storm and curtails his selling and advertising activities is helping to bring about the economic prostration that he vainly hopes to protect himself against. Business depressions cannot be fought by throwing men out of work and destroying the purchasing power that is the lifeblood of the economic system. Hence Mr. Hoffman preaches the necessity of intensifying, instead of reducing, market pressures to "keep alive the will to buy." It is a policy that calls for courage, and it may not always succeed. But the alternative plan of general retrenchment presents even more terrifying possibilities of ruin.

We agree with Mr. Hoffman that a major depression of the magnitude of that experienced in the thirties would not only spell suffering for millions of Americans but would probably spell the downfall of our free economic system. For the pressure to provide jobs for the idle would force the Government to intervene, and doubtless compel it to guarantee full employment—a promise that could only be fulfilled by establishing dictatorial controls over the movement of labor and capital. In bringing home to businessmen their responsibility for preserving our free political and economic institutions by fighting threatening depressions instead of taking shelter at the first sign of a disturbance, Mr. Hoffman is merely stating obvious truths that it should not be necessary to learn all over again by hard experience.

Significant Victory

The outcome of the congressional race in Pennsylvania's Eighth District was never in doubt, as the district is normally Republican, although it went Democratic in 1934 and 1936. However, it is in such rockribbed strongholds of Republicanism that after a general election landslide one would look for signs of disaffection reflected in a dwindling majority vote. Of that there is no evidence in Pennsylvania's Eighth District, for the Republican candidate for Congress, Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, has been elected by a majority exceeding the one rolled up last year by his predecessor, the late Representative Gerlach.

What is much more significant, Mr. Lichtenwalter obtained a fair majority in industrial Lehigh County and carried the highly industrialized city of Allentown, the largest in the district, by a small margin. The results, we think, would have warranted the enthusiasm with which Chairman Reece of the Republican National Committee has hailed the outcome, even if the contest had been an ordinary off-year election. But the Eighth District contest was more than that; it was a test of the district's attitude toward the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, which was made a major campaign issue, with the Democratic candidate, backed by a coalition of CIO, AFL, and independent unions, advocating repeal of the law.

The outcome of a single local by-election cannot be considered a surefire indication of a national trend. Nevertheless, the decision of organized labor groups to test the strength of the public's antagonism to the Taft-Hartley Labor Act by injecting themselves into the Pennsylvania contest indicates that they overrated the vote-getting potentialities of a campaign aimed at overthrow of the law. They also failed to allow for the natural resentment aroused among the voters by outside intervention. Hence, whatever conclusions labor leaders may draw from the rebuff they have received, the strategists of the Democratic Party will be well advised not to rely overheavily on a resentful labor vote to defeat the Republicans in 1948.

A. K. Coomaraswamy

Dr. Ananda Kentish Coomaraswamy, who died last Tuesday at Needham, Mass., was one of those men who, while remaining almost unknown to the multitude, nevertheless exert a tremendous influence on the thought of their times. Of mixed English and Ceylonese ancestry, and educated for the most part in London, Dr. Coomaraswamy was perhaps the foremost exponent of what has been called the philosophia perennis, by which is meant the concepts and teachings which are common to all the great religions, and his ideas found popular expositors in writers like Aldous Huxley and Gerald Heard. He was a man of prodigious learning, equally at home in Vedic, classical, medieval European and Islamic literatures.

Early in life he abandoned the career in Indian politics, for which he seemed to have been destined, for the study of art. He quickly became one of the foremost interpreters of the philosophical and religious nature of artistic creation. For Coomaraswamy, art was not a luxury or a superfluous adornment of life, but an occupation necessary to the moral and social health of the human organism. Man, he insisted, is by nature a maker, and it is through his creative faculty that he exercises his freedom of will. Mass production and machine culture are, therefore, evil and inhuman, because they deprive the worker of this freedom and reduce him to the status of a mere automaton.

In 1916 he left India to join the staff of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, where he remained until his death, and where he was chiefly instrumental in gathering together one of the finest collections of Far Eastern art on this continent. His long residence in the United States, however, by no means reconciled him to the civilization that he observed here, and he remained until the end one of the sharpest and most effective critics of modernity in all its forms.

Small fire-bird,
how well you earn your name,
wings of burning jet,

Your bright red-orange plumage threaded with bark and twine) then seek once more the green sky of the tree to improvise

your clear, sweet melody!

European Clearing House

This country made it clear to the world that it wishes to help Europe to rehabilitate itself and, already, heads of certain governments are working to find the way to it under the Marshall Plan.

But what is the Marshall Plan going to be, assistance in the form of loans?

Starting from the point of view that what European countries are in need of is goods and not money, I would propose the creation of an "International Clearing House" through which all imports and exports would be carried out.

In very rough lines it is like this. Each country involved would have to estimate its needs in food, raw materials, etc. Each member country of the International Clearing House would be debited for its imports and, on the other hand, credited for its exports. There would be a limit, predetermined for each country, up to which it could operate in red figures. Once that limit was reached, that country would have to stop any further imports until such time as, through its own exports, its debt would be diminished.

In other words, the I.C.H. would have as purpose to make possible the reestablishment of commercial relations between the countries on a bartering basis by simplifying the procedure.

It goes without saying that, in view of the fact that most European countries are not yet in a position to produce for export, the heaviest part of the burden will fall on this country's shoulders.

"Psychiatric Clinic"

I want to write a few words about the editorial "Psychiatric Clinic" which appeared in The Washington Post on September 6.

The establishment of the outpatient psychiatric clinic will answer a real need in Washington. However, I do wish the psychiatrists, who will dispense advice and help, will not neglect to encourage their patients to turn to their respective religions.

SYDNEY GELFAND.

Your editorial "Psychiatric Clinic" is just another method of arousing curiosity of the public and boosting psychiatry. The psychiatrist can find something mentally wrong about anybody (except himself) if it will pay him to do so.

The critical glance at medical practice and the statements of medical authorities should convince anyone with an open mind or a little independence that medical practice should be restricted or controlled and the myth of psychiatry laughed out of existence.

The insane asylums contain too many innocent, harmless and sane people. Most hideous of all forms of racketeering is that which preys on the sick (mentally and physically.) PETER COOPER.

Social Security Gaps

President Truman's Labor Day recommendation for a better and more inclusive Social Security system is wise and statesmanlike, for our present "system" is full of gaps. Many classes of workers, including seamen, domestic workers, agricultural workers, and the employes of nonprofit institutions such as colleges and hospitals, are now excluded from the benefits of old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, for no good reason except that, in order to get the original law passed, it was believed wiser not to make it too inclusive.

The rate of benefits for both old-age pensions and unemployment insurance was set before the war. Some States have raised the rate of benefits for unemployment insurance since then, but in hardly any case have the rates been raised in proportion to the increased cost of living. The Federal rates for old-age pensions, though they go up automatically to some extent as wages go up, ought to be revised upward especially for the minimum and maximum amounts.

Finally, there is no reason at all why a person who is unable to work because he was hurt on the job should get part of his pay and medical care and hospital care through workmen's compensation, while a person who cannot work because of sickness or nonindustrial accident gets neither pay nor medical care. We need to broaden our Social Security system to provide both cash and care through health insurance for workers who are sick or otherwise disabled. This is already being done in most other industrially advanced countries. It can be done while preserving free choice by patients of doctors and vice versa, in order to meet the objection urged by many doctors.

Understanding Britain

In answer to Matilda Kaufman's letter, of September 5, "Understanding Britain," I would like to say that judging others through their mistakes has been proved to be the wrong thing to do.

The Palestine problem, for instance, I believe goes much deeper than the Jewish question, important as this is. The Arab does not like the foreigner and England has the embarrassing problem of keeping peace with troops, for they do respect strength, which she would rather use in her coal mines. And the Middle East has always been the sore spot of the world. Even the U. N. has not found a satisfying solution to the problem.

Besides, there is very little time left. The world is divided into two camps and you cannot blame people for turning to the one with which they have affinities of language, government and religion.

My family like millions of others in Europe has faith in your people. They hope that a democracy knows when to forgive and when to understand her duties. The small countries of Europe would not be what they are today if all the big nations of the world had not believed in isolationism and if they had been willing to join the League of Nations.

There is very little time left, very little time; or would Miss Kaufman rather see them on the other side of the fence?

"Wedemeyer's Advice"

Your article, entitled "Wedemeyer's Advice" by George Marvin in The Washington Post of September 5, is certainly a feeble attempt to impress upon the American reader something that isn't even clear to the author.

Students of Far Eastern affairs, however, will agree with Mr. Marvin's statement that we have built up "a fantastic body of misinformation," especially concerning China. Unfortunately, however, Mr. Marvin, in spite of his 40 years in the study of China, is still contributing to this body of misinformation through his self-contradictory statements.

Very emphatically he says: "China is not a nation." He adds, "Never throughout its modern history has it enjoyed anything approaching unity." Yet he goes right on to say that Chiang Kai-shek has been one of the most absolute dictators of modern times.

He ought to know that an absolute dictatorship cannot function over an area which is not unified as one nation.

Mr. Marvin makes the assertion that the Chinese cannot possibly respond to anything ideological either in government or citizenship, and furthermore states that no outside influence can produce unity. He is sadly misinformed there, for China's ancient ideologies were and still are widespread and popular among the people, and only in recent times it was well demonstrated that Japan's attack on China did much to produce unity among the Chinese. It is what happened after the war that contributed most to the destruction of China's wartime unity. Thus we see that outside influences are capable of not only producing unity but also of destroying it. Destruction of unity has been the direct result of Soviet Russia's aid to the Chinese Communists.

Mr. Marvin, however, touches only lightly upon the matter of communism. He makes a half-hearted attempt to put over the idea that only in Red areas of China are the people living orderly and contentedly, loyally devoted to leaders sprung from the soil. That is pure nonsense, for many of China's present leaders are sprung from the soil. Chiang himself came from an extremely poor family, and in the past many of the greatest leaders sprung from the lowest stock. The Chinese are among the most democratic people in the world, but their government has not been much of a democracy. But then, on the other hand, no one has ever called China a democracy, and it is, therefore, not clear to me what Mr. Marvin refers to when he raves about the misapplication of the word. He says that the most ridiculous travesties have been perpetrated in the use and meaning of words in the vocabulary of power politics. This is certainly true wherever the word "democracy" has been applied to Soviet Russia, toward which he appears to lean strongly. But Mr. Marvin is guilty of contributing to exactly such travesties by confusing democracy with unity. Hitler's Reich was definitely both unified and anti-democratic. America was democratic even when she was fighting the Civil War.

With the dissemination of Mr. Marvin's type of Far Eastern analysis, Americans are apt to lose sight of the fact that Chiang Kai-shek, as leader of all China, was our ally during the war against the Axis. Had he been Fascist, as he has so often been pictured to be, he should have acceded to Japan's suggestion to join the anti-Comintern Pact and to become a partner in the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis, or at least to be benevolently cooperative with the Axis as Franco was. Instead, we find Chiang fighting against the Japanese and cooperating with us. In the process of doing that his country and his people suffered terribly, and I cannot imagine that Mr. Marvin knows nothing of China's war devastation. Soviet Russia, on the other hand, was permitted, and partly through our connivance, to gain territorial advantages in Manchuria and to loot from China two billion dollars' worth of industrial equipment, while we just sat by, watching benignly.

I have lived 24 years in China, I grew up there and speak the language. I understand the Chinese people and sympathize with them and it is my opinion that if it is worthwhile for us to attempt to save Europe from collapse, it is equally important that we extend a helping hand to China. Furthermore, as an American, I believe that such a policy will be to the advantage of our own national welfare.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Polish Iron Curtain

WARSAW, POLAND. — In a time of conflict and confusion such as ours, phrases and slogans tend to get in the way of reality. When that brilliant phrase-maker, Winston Churchill, coined the expression, "The Iron Curtain," he amplified life for millions of us who could go on repeating it parrotlike and thereby save ourselves the trouble of thinking.

Insofar as Poland is concerned, the reality is enormously more complicated. Here the so-called Iron Curtain is as full of holes as a sieve. The fact that we are not making more use of the holes in the curtain is our own fault and, in my opinion, it is a grievous fault.

We should be doing everything possible to spread American ideas and American ideals throughout Poland. We should be advertising the rewards and satisfactions of American life in the way that we know how to do so very well.

Instead, our information office in connection with the American Embassy consists of only two Americans and nine Polish employes. They seem to be doing the best they know how, but it is a small candle to set against the fierce wind that blows from the East.

CHIEF PUBLIC relations officer is Walter K. Schwinn, who was for 14 years associate editor of the Hartford (Conn.) Courant. During the war he was chief intelligence officer of the Foreign Economic Administration, serving in Africa, Sicily, Italy, France and Germany. Later he was with the State Department in Washington for a year.

His assistant is Chester H. Ogden, who formerly did newspaper work in Chicago and later was on the public relations staff of the University of Chicago. He speaks Polish.

In temporary wooden huts behind the ruins of the old embassy building, they maintain a library open to all. They send out to a large mailing list, including all newspapers, copies of speeches by American officials. They work hard for an exchange of students between the two countries.

Perhaps the most effective work they do is the circulation of films showing various phases of American life. At least a hundred such documentary films—some made by the Government, some by industry—are being shown all over Poland before every kind of club and organization.

One of the most popular of these films was made by the Standard Oil Co. to advertise the joys of motoring in West Virginia. It shows the beauty of the countryside and the strength of industry. One Pole was heard to remark, after he had seen the picture:

"What a wonderful country America is! What beautiful highways! And did you notice that nobody was walking on them?"

That last meant a lot in a despoiled country where men and women trudge for miles, with packs on their backs, because there is no transportation of any kind. This is self-advertising that shows America to best advantage.

THE UNITED STATES information program should be greatly expanded. We should have branch offices in the industrial city of Lodz and in Katowice, center of the new expanding industrial area in Silesia. There should be a branch in Cracow, the center of the old Poland.

Our information officers here know this all too well. They have been eager to produce a magazine in Polish similar to Amerika, which is so sought after inside Russia. One copy of this was printed in Polish nearly two years ago and there are still repeated demands for it.

The British, in their information setup, have 19 British employes and 56 Poles. They publish a Polish language weekly, Voice of England, which is almost the only uncensored publication inside Poland.

The point is that the Polish government puts few if any obstacles in the way of such activity. If it were greatly expanded, restrictions might follow, but certainly it would be worth while making the effort.

A number of agencies are supervising the distribution in Poland of voluntary relief from America. I talked with a half dozen young Americans with the Friends Service Committee. They told me they had traveled all over Poland without being molested in any way. They found a friendly reception almost everywhere and an unmistakable conviction that the relief distributed through UNRRA had all come from America.

We could do so much more here in this tragic country if only we would. The base for friendship is in the millions of Polish-Americans in the U. S. A. It is defeatism, insofar as Poland is concerned, to go on muttering about Iron Curtains.

Hoover and the War

The great engineer is pontificating again. Author of "a chicken in every pot," "two cars in every garage," "prosperity just around the corner," the "Hawley-Smoot tariff," he is the engineer who indorses Governor Green of Illinois as the most available candidate for Republican nomination for our next President.

Had Mr. Hoover when President of our country, listened to his own Secretary of State, Mr. Henry L. Stimson, perhaps there would not have been a war with Japan 10 years later, as Mr. Simson wanted to call the Japanese bluff when he was Secretary of State in Mr. Hoover's Cabinet.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Cold War V

THERE IS a still greater disadvantage in a policy which seeks to "contain" the Soviet Union by attempting to make "unassailable barriers" out of the surrounding border states. They are admittedly weak. Now a weak ally is not an asset. It is a liability. It requires the diversion of power, money, and prestige to support it and to maintain it. These weak states are vulnerable. Yet the effort to defend them brings us no nearer to a decision and to a settlement of the main conflict. Worst of all, the effort to develop such an unnatural alliance of backward states must alienate the natural allies of the United States.

Lippmann

THE NATURAL allies of the United States are the nations of the Atlantic community; that is to say, the nations of western Europe and of the Americas. The Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea, which is an arm of the Atlantic Ocean, unite them in a common strategic, economic and cultural system. The chief components of the Atlantic community are the British Commonwealth of Nations, the Latin states on both sides of the Atlantic, the Low Countries and Switzerland, Scandinavia and the United States.

The boundaries of the Atlantic community are not sharp and distinct, particularly in the case of the Germans and the western Slavs and the dependencies and the colonies of western Europe. But the nucleus of the Atlantic community is distinct and unmistakable, and among the nations that are indisputably members of the Atlantic community there exists a vital connection founded upon their military and political geography, the common traditions of western Christendom, and their economic, political, legal, and moral institutions which, with all their variations and differences, have a common origin and have been shaped by much the same historic experience.

NOW THE policy of containment as described by Mr. X, is an attempt to organize an anti-Soviet alliance composed in the first instance of peoples that are either on the shadowy extremity of the Atlantic community, or are altogether outside it. The active proponents of the policy have been concerned immediately with the anti-Soviet parties and factions of eastern Europe, with the Greeks, the Turks, the Iranians, the Arabs and Afghans, and with the Chinese Nationalists.

Instead of concentrating their attention and their efforts upon our old allies of the Atlantic community, the makers and the shapers of the policy of containment have for more than a year been reaching out for new allies on the perimeter of the Soviet Union. This new coalition, as we can see only too clearly in Greece, in Iran, in the Arab states and in China, cannot in fact be made to coalesce. Instead of becoming an unassailable barrier against the Soviet power, this borderland is a seething stew of civil strife.

WE HAVE not succeeded in organizing the new and alien coalition of the Russian perimeter, and we have failed to consolidate, as the mounting crisis of western Europe and of Latin America shows, the old and familiar coalition of the Atlantic community. The supporters of the Truman Doctrine attribute the divisions and the paralysis of western Europe to the machinations of the Soviet Union, to its obstruction in the United Nations and in all the various peace conferences, to the propaganda, the infiltration of the Communist parties. Perhaps. But their argument, if true, destroys the last reason for thinking that the policy of containment can be made to work successfully.

For the nations of the Atlantic community are not occupied by the Red army. They cannot be occupied by the Red army unless the Kremlin is prepared to face a full scale world war, atomic bombs and all the rest. Though impoverished and weakened, the nations of the Atlantic community are incomparably stronger, richer, more united and politically more democratic and mature than any of the nations of the Russian perimeter.

If the Soviet Union is, nevertheless, able to paralyze and disorganize them, then surely it can much more readily paralyze and disorganize the nations of the perimeter. They are already paralyzed and disorganized. They have never, in fact, been organized and effective modern states. Yet we are asked to believe that we can organize the perimeter of Russia, though the Russians are so strong and so cunning that we cannot consolidate the Atlantic community.

BY CONCENTRATING our efforts on a diplomatic war in the borderlands of the Soviet Union, we have neglected—because we do not have unlimited power, resources, influence, and diplomatic brain power—the vital interests of our natural allies in western Europe, notably in reconstructing their economic life and in promoting a German settlement on which they can agree.

The failure of our diplomatic campaign in the borderlands, on which we have staked so much too much, has conjured up the specter of a Third World War. The threat of a Russian-American war, arising out of the conflict in the borderlands, is dissolving the natural alliance of the Atlantic community. For the British, the French, and all the other Europeans, see that they are placed between the hammer and the anvil. They realize, even if we do not realize it, that the policy of containment in the hope that the Soviet power will collapse by frustration, cannot be enforced and cannot be administered successfully, and that it must fail. Either Russia will burst through the barriers which are supposed to contain her, and all of Europe will be at her mercy, or, at some point and at some time, the diplomatic war will become a full scale shooting war. In either event Europe is lost. Either Europe falls under the domination of Russia, or Europe becomes the battlefield of a Russian-American war.

BECAUSE THE policy of containment offers these intolerable alternatives to our old allies, the real aim of every European nation, including Great Britain, is to extricate itself from the Russian-American conflict. While we have been devoting our energies to lining up and bolstering up the Chinese Nationalists, the Iranians, the Turks, the Greek monarchists and conservatives, the anti-Soviet Hungarians, Romanians, Poles, the natural alignment of the British, French, Belgians, Dutch, Swiss and Scandinavians has been weakened.

And so in any prudent estimate of our world position, they are no longer to be counted upon as firm members of a coalition led by the United States against the Soviet Union. We must not deceive ourselves by supposing that we stand at the head of a worldwide coalition of democratic states in our conflict with the Soviet Union.

The aim of the leading democratic states of Europe and probably also of the Americas is at best to hold the balance of power between Russia and America, and thus to become mediators of that conflict. At worst, their aim is to isolate themselves in some kind of neutrality which will spare them the dual catastrophe of being overrun by the Red Army and bombed by the American air forces.

For they cannot have reasonable confidence in what Mr. X says is sufficient ground for reasonable confidence. They cannot rely on his wishful prediction which "cannot be proved" and "cannot be disproved," that the Soviet power will break up or "mellow" when it has been frustrated for 10 or 15 years by unassailable barriers in such inaccessible "individual sectors" as Manchuria, Mongolia, north China, Afghanistan, Iran, Hungary and Romania.

They remember Mr. Chamberlain's efforts to contain Hitler by a guarantee to Poland. They remember Mr. Hull's efforts to contain Japan in China. They know that a policy of containment does not contain, that measures of "counterforce" are doomed to be too late and too little, that a policy of holding the line and hoping for the best means the surrender of a strategic initiative, the dispersion of our forces without prospect of a decision and a settlement, and in the end a war which, once begun, it would be most difficult to conclude.

AFL Blames Russia for Unrest; Demands Prompt Big-4 Parley

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—The AFL executive council today blamed Russia for "the turmoil and tensions that exist in many nations of Enrope and Asia" and called for an immediate conference of the "Big Four" nations.

The council said the United Nations had afiled as an organization to keep the peace, and proposed that President Truman, Premier Stalin and the heads of the British and French governments get together at once.

"The deterioration of international relations has reached such alarming proportions that an eventual break appears inevitable unless strong and constructive leadership is exerted," the council said.

U. S. Action Demanded

"The United States should not be content with sitting back and waiting for the next move by Russia. We are convinced that our country should take the initiative toward seeking an immediate clarification of the difficulties existing between our country and Russia.

"War with Russia should be prevented if at all possible."

In addition to the stand on international affairs, the council devoted considerable time to the writing of its report t the AFL convention, which begins in San Francisco October 6.

It also called for the immediate dismissal of Irving G. McCann as counsel for the House Labor subcommittee which has been investigating Hollywood labor troubles.

The council said McCann "physically attacked" AFL general counsel Joseph A. Padway, who has been ailing for months, at a hearing in Los Angeles a month ago. McCann also "grossly insulted" ALF Vice President William C. Doherty, a witness at the hearing, the council said. The Congressional attorney made an unflattering comparison on the size of Doherty's feet and intellect.

AFL President William Green said the political action program—aimed at defeating Congressmen who voted for the Taft-Hartley Labor-Management Relations Act—would be developed tomorrow.

Also, the AFL leaders will issue a new declaration on their objective merger with the CIO, Green said.

Ballot Under Taft-Hartley Act Ended 31 Strikes, Officials Say

By The Associated Press

Government labor conciliators said yesterday one provision of the Taft-Hartley law has led to settlement of at least 31 strikes in the last six weeks.

The provision, set forth in three printed lines of the law, calls for conciliators to suggest a secret ballot among workers on accepting or rejecting their employer's final offer in a dispute.

It is up to the employer and union to agree to such an election; the plan is purely voluntary.

So, during the past six weeks, the conciliation service has been suggesting such elections and already almost 80 have been held.

In 31 of them the workers voted to accept their employer's last settlement offer. In 25 the workers voted against it. Results of the other elections have as yet to be reported by field offices.

The conciliation service disclosed that it began this week with only 134 strike cases involving 52,000 workers on its docket, about the lightest load it has carried since the war end.

Negotiations continued here, under conciliation service auspices, in efforts to settle the 11-week strike at Bethlehem shipyards, one of the largest of East Coast walkouts.

John Green, president of the CIO Marine and Shipyard Workers Union, told reporters that a Bethlehem offer of a 12-cent hourly wage increase probably would be accepted. But, he said that the main company-union difference is a company proposal to change a number of provisions in the former contract, including seniority and grievance procedures.

Green said he is confident that any settlement reached with Bethlehem will also be made to apply to the several other smaller East Coast shipyards at which his union is on strike.

Shifting The Burden

By Barnet Nover

Let Us Have The Full Truth

AS A RESULT of American advice—and pressure—the estimate of what Western Europe will need successfully to carry out the Marshall Plan is believed to have been whittled down from $29,200,000,000 to $20,000,000,000 spread out over a four-year period.

NOVER

Considered in the light of American political realities, this downward revision was perhaps inevitable. The 16 nations participating in the Paris meeting on the Marshall Plan may feel, and have so argued, that American aid to the tune of 30 billion dollars would just barely put Europe back on its feet.

Even that sum, some European experts contend, would still leave a deficit of around four billion dollars to be met somehow when the Marshall Plan comes to an end in 1951.

THE FACT REMAINS that the United States is no inexhaustible well and that an economy-minded Congress is certain to give any aid program the most critical kind of scrutiny. It may balk at appropriating the sum needed to get a 20-billion-dollar rehabilitation plan going. It is far more likely to object to a 30-billion-dollar plan.

Under the circumstances, then, it would seem to be wiser for the Paris conferees to ask for too little than for too much.

Even the minimum estimate represents a sum just about twice the total which the United States made available to European countries on relief and rehabilitation account.

In all, such appropriations have amounted to $10,740,000,000, of which $2,700,000,000 was for UNRRA and $3,750,000,000 in the form of a loan to Great Britain.

When we recall the difficulties that were encountered in getting Congress to vote those sums we get an idea of the problem it is going to be to carry out the Marshall Plan even on the most modest basis.

IT IS QUITE possible that the original $29,200,000,000 estimate drawn up by the experts at Paris contained a certain amount of padding.

Every country represented at the European conference was under temptation to ask for more than it thought it was likely to get in the hope of getting as much as it thought it really needed.

The point must be borne in mind, however, that whatever we do in the way of implementing the Marshall Plan should be done with the idea of really getting Europe back on its feet and not merely postponing the problem by palliative measures.

In other words, considerations of political expediency should not be allowed to interfere with the achievement of the great and essential goal of economic salvation.

THE HISTORY of the British loan is instructive in that regard.

At the outset of the negotiations for that loan the British asked for a good deal more than they finally got. It is now clear that the sum they asked for—$5,000,000,000 was not excessive, considered in terms of Britain's needs and particularly in the light of what has since happened to the American price level.

We did not save any money by cutting down the British request to make the loan palatable to Congress. All that has happened is that we have had to add to the loan actually made a number of concealed loans.

Certainly, the $400,000,000 we advanced to Greece and Turkey was made necessary, in part at least, by the circumstance that Great Britain found it impossible to carry out her commitments in the Near East. Now we find it necessary to take over other burdens which the British have borne.

In November a conference is to be held in Washington to consider the question of the division of occupation costs in the economically united British-American zones of Germany.

Under the existing arrangement these costs have been prorated on a 50-50 basis. This involved, among other things, the expenditure by Great Britain in the 12 months from July 1, 1946, to June 30, 1947, of 169 million dollars, reducing by that sum Britain's dollar holdings.

A change, in Britain's favor, in the percentage division of occupation costs will be tantamount to a concealed loan to that country.

Nor is Germany the only area where the process of shifting the burdens from Great Britain to the United States is likely to take place. It will happen everywhere where the United States finds it necessary to assume obligations which Great Britain has hitherto carried out.

It was no real advantage to us to keep down the size of the loan to Great Britain. It will be no advantage to us to reduce the Marshall Plan estimates if, as a result of that reduction, the purposes of that comprehensive proposal for European rehabilitation are defeated.

Personal Incomes in July Hit Record Rate of 197 Billions

By The Associated Press

Personal incomes soared in July to a new record rate of 197 billion dollars a year.

The Commerce Department reported the increase yesterday. It said the rate was two billion dollars over that in June the previous peak and 20 million dollars ahead of last year.

If the rate keeps up for 11 more months:

1. The Government would collect more taxes than the $41,667,000,000 President Truman foresaw in forecasting a $4,667,000,000 surplus in the Treasury for the fiscal year that began July 1.

2. Personal incomes would top by $5,400,000,000 the presidential estimate of $191,600,000,000.

An increase on that scale ordinarily would boost Government revenues more than $1,500,000,000.

Wages and salaries, the biggest single item of personal income, were at an annual rate of $121,500,000,000 during July. Net income of farm and business owners and landlords was the second largest at an annual rate of $48,200,000,000.

Personal income also includes dividends and interest on securities, as well as relief payments.

The Commerce Department said increased wages and salaries resulted from "a further rise in trade payrolls, negotiated wage rate increases for bituminous coal miners and the continued expansion of construction employment."

Stanley said Roosevelt had ignored answering the charges three times.

All Greeks Have Confidence In Sophoulis, Elder Statesman

By M. W. Fodor
Post Reporter

Athens, Greece.—Premier Themistocles Sophoulis is to Greece what Henry W. Stimson is to the United States—the elder statesman in whom the entire country has great confidence and whose integrity is unimpeachable.

Therefore, his appearance before Parliament, outlining the program of the new government, was a signal for a touching ovation for the "grand old man of Greece."

He is very old—some 87 years—but he did not look it as he stood in the well of Parliament, with his black-rimmed spectacles hanging down on his long, typically Grecian nose. He seemed to have thrown off the years, and as he got into his speech, he put into it much of the fervor and dynamic quality that we remember in the Sophoulis of old.

Even Populists Applaud

It was late at night, and long past his usual bedtime. The galleries were packed, and there was frequent applause from both the galleries and the floor. It was significant, I thought, that even some of the Populist politicians, who have fought tooth and nail against any consideration of the rights of rebels or of those with Republican political leanings, should applaud the old man as he asked for complete political amnesty and a united Greece.

Sophoulis said that the political amnesty he is offering is valid for all answering the call of the nation for unity. He said the government is ready to "cast complete oblivion on the past, without any conditions."

He said his government would insure life and liberty without exception to those who return to the villages and their families. He concluded by saying that the government will invite an international committee to supervise this guaranty.

Raise Living Standards

Then the old man went into his economic program. His voice quivered a bit as he called attention to the necessity of raising the standard of life of all the people, both urban and rural. He named governmental economies, including taxes on the rich, suppression of inadmissible and provocative luxuries for the few. He said that the rich must realize their duty t ward the community, and added that the cabinet will insu the liberty of labor unions.

He concluded by saying that t external policy of Greece will on the note of the great desire that country for peace and liber and international cooperation.

There was applause as he s Greece is "deeply devoted to United Nations," and he add that the United Nations' interve tion will put an end to extern plots. As soon as these plots cea he said, Greece will offer her ha to her northern neighbors i peaceful cooperation.

Criticism Mild

What criticism there was Sophoulis' speech was compa tively mild.

Papandreou, former minister interior and leader of the Dem cratic Socialist Party, made a so box speech which was intended deride the government hopes, he wound up by taking credit bringing about the downfall of Maximos government, which me that he really thought the n government was vastly super to the old.

The advent of Sophoulis to premiership has brought about great change in the tens throughout Greece. There is so concern over the fact that Sophoulis, at his age, is a pretty slend reed to depend on. But if old man can continue in the for ful way he delivered his spee to Parliment, there will not much to worry about. Under circumstances will he be a stoo for Tsaldaris, the deputy premi and spokesman for the extre right-wing Royalist faction Greece.

New 6-Month Peak Set Here in Air Traffic

By S. Oliver Goodman

Despite a sharp decline in June, air passenger traffic at the Washington National Airport for the first six months of 1947 set an all-time high for that period.

Number of passengers enplaning and deplaning was 546,960 this year through June 30, compared with 537,482 in the same 1946 period. These figures are part of a comprehensive compilation by the Washington Board of Trade, issued in pamphlet form and entitled "Washington's Air Traffic."

This city, the survey showed, ranks third in the Nation's airline passenger traffic. Only New York and Chicago are ahead.

Commenting on the Capital's air growth, the Board of Trade said:

"Except for a drop in the early part of 1943, caused by wartime restrictions on flying, Washington's passenger service has grown in leaps and bounds. Starting from approximately 50,000 persons in July 1942, it (air passenger traffic) has steadily increased and reached an all-time monthly peak of almost 132,000 in August 1946 . . ."

Comparative passenger figures for the first six months follow:

January	64,126	62,844
February	59,961	68,111
March	78,400	87,631
April	103,245	108,920
May	111,086	121,504
June	120,574	97,950

Chicago, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—Big, laughing James Mattalina, who never quite managed to make ends meet on his $35-a-week chauffeur's salary, shook himself out of a glorious daze today. His late employer left him $300,000, maybe $500,000, in cash, stocks, bonds, farms and oil wells.

Mattalina

"First we've gotta have a banquet," he said, "for all my family and all my fine friends, and I can watch them eat and eat and eat."

Mattalina was overcome yesterday when an attorney drove up in a limousine, knocked on the door and announced that Miss Anne Craig, 83, who died last Saturday, had left her chauffeur the bulk of her fortune.

River Dragged For 8 Missing In Boat Blast

Pittsburgh, Sept. 10 (AP).—Firemen laboriously cut through the tangled wreckage of the river steamer Island Queen, dragged the Monongahela River bottom and sent divers into the murky stream today seeking eight crew members missing after a terrific explosion and fire destroyed the boat yesterday.

Twelve bodies have been recovered, three of them unidentified, 13 of the 18 injured remain hospitalized.

Edward L. Schott, president of the Cincinnati corporation which owned the boat, said 20 crew members were dead or missing. He previously put the total at 21 but one was located at his home.

Cause of the blast was not known, but officials learned an acetylene torch was in use at the time of the explosion.

More steel for you than ever before

Never in peacetime history have American steelworkers and mills turned out so much steel in so short a time

Here is the record of the steel industry for the first eight months of 1947:

Exceeded all previous peacetime performances.

Production of steel ingots since January 1 was 56 million tons—an annual rate of about 85 million tons. This is 60 per cent more production than was turned out during 1939, last prewar year.

Made more steel for more goods for you.

All records were smashed in shipments of flat-rolled steel to those making automobiles, refrigerators, bathtubs, kitchen cabinets and like products. At this rate the 1947 shipments of flat-rolled steel will exceed 1939 by 79 per cent.

Met major demands of an abnormal market.

Like your family pantry and wardrobe, shelves of American industry were depleted at the end of the war. Thousands of manufacturers wanted steel for their current needs. They also wanted steel to build up their low stocks of material. This war-created abnormal demand is being steadily met.

Although today the productive capacity of the American steel industry equals all of the rest of the world combined, the industry is not stopping there. Steel is spending a record total of nearly $450,000,000 in 1947 alone for new equipment and improvements. Even greater plants are in making for the future. Steel has never stood still.

This means more and better steel for you.

Woman Injured, Dummy Colonel Loses His Hat

Marion, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Mattie Payne Blanke of Los Angeles was seriously injured when her sar hit an embankment near here yesterday and Colonel Potter-Bee, the dummy that accompanies her on all her travels as "protection" lost his hat and a part of his head.

Mrs. Blanke—who after the death of her husband, Dr. Oscar F. Blanke, in 1935 acquired the dummy to ward off hitch-hikers and moochers—was reported at Lee Memorial Hospital here to be suffering from head injuries and a fractured jaw and leg.

The black-mustached, gray-templed Colonel Potter-Bee has ridden beside her in full uniform throughout the United States, Canada and Europe. He was constructed by a Hollywood make-up artist and by the flick of a wrist Mrs. Blanke could make him turn his head and glare at anyone who "got fresh."

Alexandria, earlier known as Belle Haven and earlier still as Hunting Creek Warehouse, was laid out in 1749.

Ousted By Jury

Va. Officer Fired; Chased With Own Gu

WARREN R. BRADFORD
Speeds past the camera

A Fairfax jury yesterday voted unanimously for removal of Warren R. Bradford from office as Town Sergeant of Vienna for neglect of duty, effective immediately.

The jury reached its verdict half an hour after hearing testimony that Bradford had failed to take effective action against a man who knocked him down, stole his gun and fired five shots at him.

Three members of the town council testified they were standing in front of the town hall about 8 p. m., June 4 last, when they heard five shots. Bradford came running down the street, they said, shouting that a man had taken his gun and was shooting at him.

At the scene of the shooting, the witnesses said, they saw a man named Richard F. Smith with a gun in his hand. Smith was taken to Fairfax police station, and released on $1000 bond.

Bradford, who had held the elective office of Town Sergeant for 12 years swore out a warrant against Smith, charging felonious assault. But on June 6, just before the case was scheduled for trial, Bradford asked that the warrant be dismissed.

Citizens of Vienna filed the civil suit against Bradford, but the defendant argued the duty of prosecuting lay with the Commonwealth's Attorney, and that office had advised him to drop the case.

Supplementing these laboratories, and supplying industry with thousands of graduate engineers every year, are such famous educational institutions as the University of Chicago, Northwestern Technological Institute, Illinois Institute of Technology, and Loyola and DePaul Universities. World-famous John Crerar Library, one of the largest in existence for scientific and technological information, heads this area's impressive list of industrial library resources.

Nearly 40 thousand engineers and chemists are employed in Chicago and Northern Illinois, assuring industry of the technical "know-how" for every industrial problem and operation. Nowhere else in the United States is there such a concentration of technologists with such diversity of skills. Eighteen thousand of these men are members of the 51 societies affiliated with the Chicago Technical Societies Council, embracing almost every field of science, engineering, and technology. The Council provides a unique means for exchanging up-to-the-minute information among these skilled groups.

Manufacturers, both large and small, benefit from the great diversity of technological resources found here. You are invited to write for details on this subject, as they specifically apply to you and your business. When planning to establish or relocate your plant, let our department answer any questions you may have on this or the many other advantages offered to industry in Chicago and Northern Illinois.

An Invitation to Visitors at the Machine Tool Show, Chicago, Sept. 17-26

Pa. Drys Win 72 Victories

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 10 (AP).—Wet forces counted 82 victories and the drys 72—26 of them switches from wet to dry—as the returns rolled in today in local option referenda in more than 200 Pennsylvania communities.

With the vote in more than 50 communities, many of them rural, still to be reported, the court stood at:

Liquor—From wet to dry 11; from dry to wet 2; remained wet 42; remained dry 30.

Beer—From wet to dry 15; from dry to wet none; remained wet 38; remained dry 17.

An upset for the wets came in Greene County, where Waynesburg, the county seat, voted against the sale of both liquor and beer for the first time since repeal.

Wet forces, however, in Fayette County, turned down a proposal to outlaw sale of alcoholic beverages in Uniontown and most of the communities within a 15-mile radius of that soft coal center.

In New Salem, York County, there was an 85-85 tie on the question of permitting the sale of beer.

Million Sought In Overtime Pay

Baltimore, Sept. 10 (AP).—Damage suits asking nearly one million dollars were filed today in Federal Court against 19 stevedoring companies in behalf of 300 workmen claiming back overtime pay.

The suits alleged the defendants have failed to pay the correct hourly pay and proper overtime compensation to the plaintiffs since September 1, 1941.

It was claimed that unpaid compensation from each company exceeds $25,000.

Building Cost Cuts Housing, Experts Tell Joint Committee are so high that only this number can be sold.

Index Shows 77% Gain

Based on the index of 1927—in other words using prices of 1927 as 100 per cent—wholesale building prices now average 177 per cent.

But lumber, for example, is now 269 per cent, and has increased 169 per cent.

High prices in large part go back to the old law of supply and demand and profit. There are certain shortages.

These are primarily soil pipe, nails, gypsum and lumber. Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), vice chairman of the committee to whom Chairman Ralph A. Gamble (R., N. Y.) turned over conduct of the hearings, proposed industry conferences to break these log jams.

Such conferences would work this way. Nails, the experts said, are short mainly because they are a low-profit item and the steel industry is simply not producing enough.

McCarthy proposed calling in the steel chiefs, explaining the need for nails, and pointing out that unless the industry produced them voluntarily, Congress might have to set up some system of allocation by legislation.

Under these conditions, the experts agreed, the steel industry might get out enough nails for America's building.

Creedon told the committee that in some cases boards of directors in any given industry hesitate to give the go-ahead signal for increasing production facilities for fear of over-expansion. Congressional conferences might resolve such doubts, he declared.

Hot, Dry August Damaging To Crops in Adjacent States

Like most of the rest of the country, the states adjacent to Washington, suffered considerable crop damage during August due to unfavorable weather conditions.

"Corn in Delaware and Maryland suffered from hot, dry August weather," the Government Crop Report yesterday stated, "but in the other South Atlantic States the production outlook improved.

"Indicated yields in West Virginia . . . are the highest of record."

The Japanese beetle caused considerable damage to the soybean crop in Maryland, the report said, and "dry weather in the principal bean sections of Virginia resulted in lowered yield prospects there."

Favorable for Peanuts

In Virginia weather conditions "were generally favorable" for peanuts, the report added.

The peach harvest was over in Virginia by September 1, the report stated, adding: "The crop is about a third less than last year's record, but 40 per cent above average.

"In Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virgnia the season is about a week later than usual, and on September 1 was about at a peak."

West Virgnia has about an average sized peach crop, Maryland dabout a fifth below average, Pennsylvania a sixth below average.

Maryland Tobacco Declines

Hot, dry weather in southern Maryland caused some firing of tobacco, the report said, estimating this year's production at 31.3 million pounds against 40.5 million last year. Better weather improved West Virgnia and Virginia tobacco. The Virginia crop is estimated at 161 million pounds against 178 million last year and West Virginia at 3,360,000 against 3,424,000 last year.

"In Delaware and Maryland, pasture condition declined sharply during August, and on September 1, was not as good as a year ago," the report said. "Virginia had considerable areas of poor pasture, but in West Virginia condition was better than a year ago."

Milk production was down throughout the entire country—totaling less in August than in 1942, 1945 and 1946, but higher than in all other years. Pennsylvania and Virginia set new records for August.

In Virginia August milk production was 196 million pounds, against 187 million a year ago.

Crops in nearby States were reported as follows:

CORN—Maryland 16,092,000 bushels against 17,328,000 in 1946. Virginia, 36,725,000; last year 36,368. West Virginia, 11,700,000, last year 10,200,000.

The average production of milk per cow in Maryland dairy herds was 18 pounds for August, the same as last year. In Virginia it was 15.8 pounds last year 14.9. In West Virginia it was 14.9 against 14.5 last year. The average for the Nation was 15.21 pounds.

From January to August, inclusive, Delaware produced 94 million eggs, compared with 106 million a year ago; Maryland 379 million against 382; Virginia 902 million against 878, and West Virginia 371 million against 374 million in 1946.

again, with retail prices of both in the larger cities reaching 90 cents.

Agriculture Department officials admitted that the corn crop report promises a bad time for meat-eaters this winter and next year. The forecast is 450 million bushels below the 3850 million the department said was necessary to maintain meat production rates.

Officials didn't hesitate to predict that meat supplies next year will be far below this year.

Crop Report Draws Newsreels, Cameras

The world-wide interest in yesterday's crop report was shown in two ways:

1. Many foreign press correspondents were in the crowd that surrounded the release table in the crop reporting office awaiting the release at 3 p. m.

2. Newsreels ground out yards of film and photographers flashbulbs kept popping—the first time in years a report has drawn such attention.

Statisticians had worked on the report, behind closed doors, since morning. None had been allowed out, or near a telephone, since the "lockup" at 3 o'clock.

—With Shirley Povich

DENVER, COLO., Sept. 10.—The enthusiastic performances of Joe Tereshinski, the Redskin right end who is bringing the old college try into the pro league, are not quite appreciated by at least one of his teammates at this point.

POVICH

Big Tereshinski, the Pennsylvania coal heaver who played his college football at the University of Georgia and has now bruised his way into a regular job with the Redskins, provoked the wrath of the Los Angeles Rams the other night. On four consecutive plays he piled into Bob Waterfield, the Rams' passer, and Waterfield was sore. Natch.

So, on the next play, Bill Shaw of the Rams came boiling around from the other end and let the Redskins' right end have it, good. Whether or not a fist was involved, I can't rightly say, but the Redskin got a cut mouth and a couple of loose teeth out of it.

The only trouble was that the man who got it was right end Jim Lookabaugh, who only a few seconds before had substituted for Right End Tereshinski, a fact of which the Rams were unaware.

WHEN THE REDSKINS signed Jimmy Youell, the former Iowa quarterback a couple of years ago, they were very proud of that manuever, pointing out that three other National League clubs were hankering for his contract.

"We kept Youell under cover and hid him away until we had his contract," the Redskins' front office said at that time.

Today, however, Fred Mandel, owner of the Detroit Lions, had a different story. "I was always amused at what the Redskins said about hiding Youell away," he said. "They did a great job of it, because at the 1943 All-Star game in Chicago, Youell was hiding away in my box while I talked contract with him."

BILL DUDLEY, who was lured back to pro football by the Lions' offer of a $25,000 contract, now makes no bones about the fact that he was eager to get away from the Pittsburgh Steelers, particularly away from Coach Jock Sutherland.

When he went into his short-lived retirement he did it politely enough, saying only that at 175 pounds, he was too small to take the physical beatings they hand out in the pro league. Since then, however, Sutherland put the rap in on Dudley, saying the latter tried to coach the team.

Of that last charge, Dudley's new coach, Gus Dorais, said today, "I don't believe it. Dudley is the easiest man to work with on my squad. And if he wants to help me coach that will be all right, too."

Dudley says he was overworked with the Steelers. In addition to his passing and ball carrying, he was the club's best defensive man. "I like to play a lot of football," he said, "but I like to take a deep breath sometimes, too."

WITH THE LIONS, Dudley again will be on a T-formation team, something he was denied at Pittsburgh where Sutherland was a steadfast single-wing coach. And with the Lions, he won't have to play quarterback, what with Roy Zimmerman available.

Dudley holds a distinction, incidentally, that is rare. He has been rewarded by the Washington Touchdown Club for three different achievements. He was voted the most valuable college back award when he was with the University of Virginia, while in the Army he was voted the best back on a service team, and last year he was named the outstanding back among the pros.

AT A TIME when the Redskins are wondering where their next good fullback is coming from, the Lions say they have no worries on that score. A rookie who has been tearing 'em up since the start of the practice season is Joe Margucci, a prize addition from the Coast League where he led the ground gainers last year.

They bought Margucci from the Redskins, who didn't even issue him a uniform.

Nats Defeat Chisox, 3-1; Masterson Gives 4 Hits

The White Sox literally threw a 3-1 ball game to the Nats last night and an investigation of this indisgression won't be necessary.

A cozy little crowd of 4,616 saw 'em do it and offered no objections. Instead, they managed a mild cheer when the Chicagoans backed up Oral Grove's spotty first-inning pitching with a farcial defensive display.

This undoubtedly chagrined the visitors, but was accepted with thanks by Pitcher Walter Masterson, who was chucking his twelfth triumph of the year.

Two unearned runs in the first enable the bespectacled right-hander to score the victory which he deserved anyway.

Allows Four Hits

He allowed only four hits and was complete master of the Sox except for a temporary lapse in the fourth when they squeezed out their lone run.

If Grove has any bones to pick over suffering his eighth reversal, he can take it out on First Baseman Rudy York and Catcher Mike Tresh.

Grove managed a five-hit effort himself, but his work went for naught, all because of that wretched start.

2 Quick Runs

The Chisox hustled right out and presented the Nats with a couple of runs in the first inning. Eddie Yost greeted Orval Grove with a single and raced to third as Buddy Lewis also singled. Sherry Robertson then grounded to Rudy York who threw to the plate to get Yost. But Catcher Mike Tresh dropped the throw, Lewis going to third.

Mickey Vernon followed with a roller to York and this time York threw to the plate again, but wildly, and Lewis walked across the plate for run No. 2.

The Nats made it 3-0 in the third on singles by Robertson and Vernon and Stan Spence's long fly to Taft Wright.

The Chisox got one run back in the fourth on singles by Wright and York followed by Joe Tucker's force out.

Masterson Smooth

Masterson continued his good work for the next three frames and chiefly because of him the Sox were able to do no good. He retired the side in order in the fifth and seventh and permitted only one Chicagoan to reach first during the three innings. Rudy York worked him for a walk in the sixth, but languished there as Tucker skied to Spence for the third out.

The Nats, meanwhile, offered a mild threat in the fifth, advancing Vernon to second with two away. But he stayed there when Priddy lifted to Tucker after Grove purposely walked Spence.

Grove was in the groove himself in the sixth and seventh, disposing of the Nats almost in the order they challenged him. Only Sherry Robertson reached first and he did it by stopping a fast ball with his knee in the seventh. That's as far as he got as Vernon dribbled to Kolloway for the third out.

Score by innings:

Chicago	000	100	000	—1	4	4
Washington	201	000	00x	—3	5	0

Philley Hurt

Centerfielder Dave Philley, of the White Sox, was injured in the second inning of last night's Griffith Stadium encounter when he crashed against the temporary fence in center, hauling in Eddie Yost's long fly.

Philley, running at full speed, caught the ball with his gloved hand, draping himself across the fence in doing it. He cut his right toe on a nail and was replaced by Joe Tucker.

He was taken to Georgetown Hospital for the administration of a tetanus shot.

Three-Run 7th Inning Shatters Deadlock

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—Brooklyn experimented with Jackie Robinson in the clean-up spot, but it was a team job of power hitting and brilliant fieldings which pulled the league-leading Dodgers out of a budding slump with a 5-to-1 win over the Chicago Cubs today.

A three-run punch in the seventh inning, including a two-marker homer by little Eddie Stanky, clinched the Dodgers' finale at Wrigley Field and ended a three-game losing streak.

The triumph, fifteenth over the Cubs in the season's 22 meetings, temporarily put the Dodgers five games in front of second-place St. Louis booked against Philadelphia in a night game at St. Louis.

Tie Broken in 7th

The deciding tally came in the seventh, with the score knotted at 1-1, when Dixie Walker opened with a double and scampered home on Spider Jorgensen's two-bagger. Then Stanky banged his homer, his third of the season.

Robinson, making his first appearance as a clean-up batter, collected a pair of singles in five trips and scored the fifth Dodger run in the eighth with a brilliant base-running display. Jackie singled, stole second by a mile, loafed to third on an infield out and then raced home on an infield out with a sprint that caught the Cubs napping. It was Robinson's twenty-fifth base theft on the season.

Joe Hatten got his fourteenth win against eight defeats, but he wasn't around at the finish. Fireman Hugh Casey, who came to Joe's rescue in the seventh, was aided by two fielding gems by center-fielder Carl Furillo.

Furillo Fields Fancy

Furillo twice leaped against the ivy-covered wall in center field to haul down screaming Cub drives. One came just as Casey entered the game with runners on first and second with two out in the seventh. Andy Pafko poled a fat Casey offering to the wall and Furillo speared it amidst the vines.

Furillo sprinted to almost the same spot to grab Ray Mack's poke in the eighth with a runner on first.

Earlier, in the fifth, Shortstop Peewee Reese, who sparkled all day affield, made a sensational one-handed stabbing catch of Phil Cavarratta's apparent Texas Leaguer with two Bruins on the sacks, and converted it into a double play.

The Brook's first run came in the fifth inning when Furillo, former clean-up hitter dropped to seventh spot, doubled and scored on an error at first.

The Cubs scored their only tally in the third on Bob Sturgeon's single and a two-bagger by Eddie Waitkus.

Chandler, MacPhail 'War' Again

Cincinnati, Sept. 10 (AP).—Larry MacPhail's standing in baseball became a matter of some question today after Commissioner A. B. Chandler began an investigation into an interview attributed to the New York Yankee head in violation of an order not to discuss the suspension of Leo Durocher.

MacPhail has a hotel reservation on file for tomorrow.

Chandler, who could not be reached at his office, declared: "I'm not going to say anything about anything," when found at Crosley Field, where the Cincinnati Reds were playing the Boston Braves. He then turned back to the game.

Writer Asked to Testify

Chandler asked Al Buck, baseball writer for the New York Post, to fly to Cincinnati for questioning in the matter. Buck advised the commissioner he could not make such an appointment.

Baseball writers on other New York evening newspapers who also quoted MacPhail said Chandler asked them to send him copies of their stories.

The writers quoted MacPhail as saying in Washington last Thursday that it was a 100-to-1 shot that Durocher would not be back as manager at Brooklyn next year.

"Do you think that Durocher would have been suspended if Rickey (Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Club) hadn't wanted him suspended?" The reporters quoted MavPhail as saying.

MacPhail, president of the New York aYnkees and at one time one of the most outspoken men in baseball, has denied that he authorized an interview.

MacPhail Isn't Silenced

When Chandler suspended Durocher on April 9 for the 1947 season for incidents "detrimental to baseball" after engaging in a verbal dispute with MacPhail and in which Rickey also became involved, he said:

"All parties to this controversy are silenced from the time this order is issued."

But MacPhail was not silenced. On April 18 he was quoted by Harry Nash in the Newark Evening News as saying "Commissioner Chandler didn't have sufficient ground on which to hang a five-minute supension" on Durocher.

A week later Chandler called MacPhail to Cincinnati. They were in conference all day and until the incident reported from Washington the Yankee club head had been about the most silent official in the big leagues.

Too Tired to Talk

MacPhail was located in Kansas City but his son, Lee, said shortly after noon today that his father was asleep and very tired. Lee said he did not know fi Chandler had contacted MacPhail.

Chandler, who one time was looked upon as easy going, became a hard-boiled commissioner about a year ago.

The suspension of Durocher was the stiffest penalty given a player or official in years.

Chandler indicated before the conference with MacPhail last April that he was more than slightly irked by the red head's actions.

The next meeting between the two men could develop something as sensational as the Durocher incident.

Favorites Advance Easily In U. S. Amateur Golf Play

Pebble Beach, Calif., Sept. 10 (AP).—Amateur golf's big guns boomed in winning fashion again today as the field reduced itself in third-round matches of the 1947 United States championship tournament.

Former champions Dick Chapman of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Johnny Goodman of Omaha came through nicely, the former taking John Daniel, Spokane, Wash., into camp, 2 and 1, and Goodman routing Bob Cochran, Overland, Mo., 6 and 5.

Tournament favorite Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, maintained his victorious pace with a 5 and 4 victory over William Roden, Odessa, Tex.

The 1935 National public links title winner, Frank Strafaci, Flushing, N. Y., caught a toughie in A. Ricard Mayer, Mamaroneck, N. Y., but pulled out with a 1-up margin.

Another upper bracket contest saw Veteran Johnny Dawson, Hollywood, Calif., eliminating Gordon Haskell, Portland, Oreg., 2 up.

Stranahan, Strafaci and Mayer all toured Pebble Beach's first nine in par 36's. Goodman, 1937 champ, and Dawson each had 37's. Chapman who won the title in 1940, took 39 blows but his rival, Daniel, had 43 for the outgoing nine.

The course was foggy and windy.

Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash., second choice favorite, shot a 1-over par 37 to lead Martin Stanovich, San Francisco, 3 up, at the turn and he closed out the match 3 and 2. Ward has played all his matches under the handicap of an infected throat.

Falkenberg Rallies to Win Net Thriller

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 10 (AP).—Long Bob Falkenburg of Los Angeles, the darling of the tnnis galleries, got up off the floor today and rallied to pull out a thrilling five-set victory over Colin Long of Australia in the National championships at Forest Hills.

Down two sets and apparently well beaten, the lanky coast star gave the stadium crowd its greatest thrill of th eday as he battled back to catch and beat the Aussie Davis Cup player by the marathon score of 4—6, 6—8, 6—3, 6—2, 6—4

At the end, when he had served an untouchable ace to end it, Falkenburg was too tired to vault the net. He climbed over, slowly, and mitted his beaten rival.

The victory, ag ift of Bob's fighting spirit, advanced him into the quarter-final round of the championships along with Juroslav who scored over Herbie Flam of 6—1, 6—4. The two were a round of the rest of the men's field.

Top Tilts Today

Two of the day's top tusseles will pit Tom Brown, jr., of San Francisco against Geoff Brown of Australia, and Pancho Secura of Ecuador against Dinny Pails of Australia.

The women's division experienced its first flurry of excitement in five days when Madame Magda Rurac, a fast-footed newcomer from Romania, dumped Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, from the tournament, 6—4, 3—6, 6—4.

Her quarter final opponent on Friday will be Margaret Osborne of San Francisco. Miss Osborne scored easily today over Jean Quertier, 6—2, 6—1.

Frankie Parker, the No. 2 seed, romped to a 6—0, 6—2, 6—3 win over Bernard Destremau and John Bromwich had an even easier time ousting Henri Rochon, 6—1, 6—0, 6—1.

Other third-round contests saw Gardnar Mulloy eliminate Sumant Misra, 6—3, 6—2, 9—7, and Dinny Pails turn back Clarence Carter of San Francisco, 6—1, 7—5, 6—2.

Breather for Kramer

Six matches tomorrow will complete the bracket for the quarter finals on Friday. Jack Kramer faces an apparently easy assignment against James Brink of Seattle, but observers expected Bromwich to have some trouble with Eddie Moylan of San Francisco.

In the day's other women's matches, Doris Hart of Miami scored another impressive victory over Mrs. Virginia Kovaes, 6—0, 6—4, and Barbara Krase eliminated the last of the English contenders, Mrs. Betty Hilton, 1—6, 6—3, 6—4.

New York, Sept. 10 (AP).—Joe Page trudged out of the bull pen for the fifty-first time of the season today and hurled the New York Yankees to a 7-to-4 decision over the Cleveland Indians that stretched the victors' American League lead to 12½ games as Boston lost to Detroit.

Any combination now of six Yankee victories or Red Sox defeats will clinch the 1947 pennant for the New Yorkers.

Vic Raschi started for the New Yorkers but was sent to the showers in the sixth. The southpaw reliefer then allowed one hit and fanned six in three and a third innings.

Bob Feller started for Cleveland and was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the fifth after giving up five hits and three runs.

NFL Planning 60-Game Slate

Philadelphia, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—Bert Bell, commissioner of the National Football League, today announced a 60-game schedule for the 1947 season, the most active since the early days of the loop when 20 teams held membership in the N. F. L.

Each of the 10 teams previously had made public its individual slate, but release of the complete schedule by league headquarters was withheld until today to prevent the rival All America Conference from re-arranging dates to its advantage in cities where both leagues have teams.

N. F. L. teams will play 12 games during the coming season, one more than ni 1946, with the Pittsburgh Steelers nad Detroit Lions opening the campaign in Pittsburgh on September 21.

Three games are scheduled for the following Sunday, September 28, Washington at Philadelphia, the Chicago Bears at Green Bay, and Detroit at the Chicago Cardinals. The season's only two night games will be played on Monday, September 29, with New York at Boston and Los Angeles at Pittsburgh.

After that, all 10 teams will play on uSnday with the exception of the annual Chicago Bears-Detroit contest which will be played on Thanksgiving Day morning, November 27. The regular season schedule will end on December 14, unless a playoff is necesary, and the championship playoffs will be held on December 21.

Blackwell Routed As Braves Win, 8-0

Cincinnati, Sept. 10 (AP).—Boston hit Ewell Blackwell and three succeeding Cincinnati pitchers for 15 hits, including two home runs, today to win the final game of the season between the clubs as the veteran Clyde Shoun held his old teammates to five hits in registering an 8-0 shutout.

Blackwell, who was knocked from the box by the St. Louis Cards in the fourth inning last Sunday, left today's game in the seventh after Shoun had singled. He was holding his side as if it hurt him as he left the mound. The Braves had pounded him for nine hits and two runs.

The loss made Blackwell's records 21 victories and 8 defeats.

Bickford has won nine and lost five for the Brewers.

Speed Specialists

Pony Backs May Surprise Hoyas' Rivals

Two tiny, explosive halfbacks, Angelo (Moe) Zanger and Lou Miller, may prove surprise packages for Georgetown's football opposition this fall.

Although together they weigh scarcely more than a good-sized tackle, both are capable sprinters and shifty ball-carriers.

Zanger is a 5-foot-8-inch, 165-pounder who starred with the championship Gonzaga team in 1944.

His excellent work with the "B" squad drew notice at the Hilltop last season and he has proved one of the fastest men on the squad in preseason scrimmages. End-around scampers and broken-field running show his speed and agility to best advantage.

Baltimore's Loyola High sent Lou Miller to Georgetown after he had led the Little Greyhounds to two State and Catholic championships. The 19-year-old sophomore packs 175 pounds on a 5-foot-6-inch frame and gets a lot of power in his punts. He flashed briefly with the Hoyas last year when he raced 75 yards against Villanova.

End Franny Desmond also shone in pass drills esterday as he pulled in tosses from every angle on the dead run. Desmond was a three-sport competitor at St. James High in Chester, Pa.

D. C. Golfer Wins, 3-2, in 2d Round

Richmond, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—A couple of reigning favorites—Mrs. James Reynolds of Richmond and Mrs. J. B. Cralle, 3d, of Roanoke—fell by the wayside today in third round matches of the Middle Atlantic Womens Golf Tournament.

Mrs. Reynolds, playing out of Glenwood Country Club, was the victim of a stunning upset at the hands of Mrs. S. R. Hall, of the Country Club of Virginia, Richmond, in a thrilling battle that ended on the twentieth green of the Hermitage Country Club course.

Mrs. Cralle, runnerup to Mrs. Reynolds in this year's Virginia State Womens Tournament, was ousted on the twenty-second hole by Mrs. George Owens of Petersburg.

Outside of these two overtime matches, results in the third round ran according to form. Tournament Medalist Mrs. Maurice Glick of the Woodholme Country Club, Baltimore, had a fight on her hands before eliminating Miss M. A. Downey of the Baltimore Country Club, one up. In the only other first flight contest—the only one, incidentally, which did not go extra holes Mrs. Betty Medley, Kenwood Country Club, Washington, came in with a 3-and-2 triumph over Mrs. Rex Howard, also of the Kenwood Club.

Results in other flights today (all third-round matches):

SECOND FLIGHT—Mrs. R. B. Moore (Richmond) defeated Mrs. Gilmer Minor (Richmond), 7 and 6; Mrs. G. S. Umpire Johnson Presented With Lifetime Pass

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 10 (AP).—Harry (Steamboat) Johnson, the Southern Association's umpire-emeritus, received a gold lifetime pass from the Association for Professional Baseball Players and Umpires today.

"It came wrapped in tissue paper and everything," exclaimed the 59-year-old veteran of the diamond. "It's beautiful. It's just like those all the big men of baseball have."

"It'll get me in any ball game in the country," bubbled the Steamer, "big leagues, little leagues, all of 'em."

The proud, colorful arbiter who called 'em for 38 years just completed his first year as an ambassador of good will for the Southern leaguers.

Johnson has also been scouting umpires for Charlie Murth, New Orleans president of the league.

Rees Red Hot

London, Sept. 10 (AP).—British Ryder Cup golfer Dai Rees continued his brilliant links pace today by scoring a 66, equal to the Langley Park course record, to lead 21 southern zone qualifiers for the News of The World match play tournament.

Coach Smith Installing 'T,' Rebuilding Lane High Eleven

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—A group of six 1946 lettermen comprises the nucleus around which Coach Walter C. Smith, new grid mentor at Lane High School here, is rebuilding his team.

Coach Smith, formerly coach at Orange High School, otherwise is faced with the task of shaping a squad largely from inexperienced material.

Around 45 candidates are out learning the T-formation which Smith inaugurated along the lines of that employed by the University of Virginia Cavaliers, preparing for Lane's opening game September 19 against Miller School when new stands now nearing completion at the Lane Athletic Field and designed to seat about 3000 spectators, will be dedicated.

Among players winning the varsity "C" letter last year are three regulars returning for action: Ends John Root and Charlie Carroll and Guard Bernie Chisholm. Other winners of the "C" letter back again include Bill Hurt, tackle; Hunter Lang, center; and Bill Adams, back.

Coach Smith has shifted Carroll, a sprinter, on the track team, to the backfield where he probably will see action at right halfback. Chason probably will operate from the left half position, Adams at quarterback and Wallenborn at fullback.

Carroll and Adams probably will do the majority of the kicking and passing.

Home games will be played at night.

The schedule:

September 19, Miller School, home; 26, George Washington of Alexandria, home.

October 3, Hampton, at Hampton; 10, Glass, at Lynchburg; 17, Andrew Lewis, home; 24, Va. School for the Deaf, home; 31, Falls Church, home.

November 7, Fairfax, home; 14, James Monroe, at Fredericksburg; 21, Washington-Lee, at Arlington.

McAndrews Back On Midget Card

Shorty McAndrews, popular Allentown, Pa., pilot of big and little cars and a reformed stuntman, comes back to the West Lanham, Md., Speedway in a powerful Offenhauser car when the seven-event midget auto racing is resumed tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock.

The versatile McAndrews previously has appeared in a Fort V-8 machine, but tomorrow night will introduce the Offy that he has restricted to dirt track competition until now. McAndrews will step out in a select Offenhauser field that includes Ed "Dutch" Schaefer, George Fonder and Mike Joseph.

Larry Bloomer, sensational Norristown, Pa., Fort entry, also will compete tomorrow night along with Red Redmond, Walt Fair, Shorty Bowers, Hawley Kight, Charlie Breslin, Mike San Felice, John Favinger and Jim Forte, to mention a few.

Jockey George Witmer Seriously Hurt in Timonium Spill

Hot Opener

Duke, State Go All Out In Practices

Richmond, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—Despite the fact that Southern Conference football teams have been practicing for less than two weeks, loop followers are already eveing the preparations for one of the season's crucial games—the Duke-N. C. State clash—now less than three weeks away.

Rarely has an early season contest been rated as being such an indicator of things to come in the Southern circuit and the prepartions in both of the grid camps involved indicate coaches and squads are looking at the tilt, booked for the Duke Stadium, in the same fiery light.

The Blue Devils' two workouts yesterday were disigned for top performance in that season opened as Coach Wallace Wade sent the Dukes through a brief, but spirited scrimmage to close the day's work.

N. C. State Works Hard

At Raleigh, Coach Beattie Feathers hoping to repeat last year's 13-6 upendings of Duke, threw everything in the practice book at his Wolfpack and also closed the day's work with a scrimmage.

The remainder of the Conference teams were far from idle, although their opening games don't hold quite the fascination the Duke-State scrap does.

Passing continued to hold the spotlight at Davidson where six tailbacks did the pitching.

Down in South Carolina, Clemson coaches were pleased with the showing of Arthur Trumpore whose performance indicated he had picked up valuable gridiron experience with Navy teams. Furman coach Bob Smith continued his position changes in his search for a well-rounded team to send against Georgia in their opening game September 19.

Citadel and the University of South Carolina had shows of broken field running as Wade Shahid and J. W. Jones galloped to five touchdowns for the Bulldogs in a scrimmage and Bishop Strickland put on an exhibition of scampering for visitin press and radio men at Columbia.

Virginia Teams Hurt

Virginia teams, with the exception of Richmond and Virginia Tech, were still busy keeping track of growing sick lists. At William and Mary Jack Cloud, all conference back, was among the injured, while Washington and Lee chalked off the name of Center Dyke Norman for one week. VMI coaches were still worried over the summer fever attacks which laid 12 of their gridders low.

Coach Jim Tatum, Maryland mentor, is awaiting the results of a bit of experimentating, have moving John Baroni from halfback to end yesterday. With an ample supply of backs on hand, Tatum hopes to get full use of Baroni at the flank post.

Vet Falls While in 1st Place

Timonium, Md., Sept. 10.— Jockey George (Pappy) Witmer appeared to have been seriously injured in an accident that marked the first race at the Timonium track today. Witmer was rushed to the Baltimore General Hospital after being thrown from S. J. Flammia's Night Colleen.

A preliminary examination revealed that the 29-year-old rider sustained several broken ribs and possible internal complications.

His mount was running freely, in front of the field, when suddenly upon nearing the far turn the saddle appeared to slip and Witmer rolled off. He was kicked and bounced around like a rubber ball as other horses hit him.

Witmer, who makes Hagerstown, Md. his home, has a wife and two children.

The majority of the 6000 customers fancied so highly the J. K. Wynkoop entry of Dr. Johnson and Louray O'Neil that the pair were installed at 1-5 odds, and at the finish of the mile and one-sixteenth fifth race it was Dr. Johnson by one and one-half lengths.

Runner-up honors went to Valdina Dust and Red Wrack was third. Time for the distance over a fast track was 1:52 2/5. The other half of the entry, Louray O'Neil set the pace with ease during the early running, but faltered badly after entering the stretch and finished fifth. At one stage he was in front by six lengths.

Handled by R. "Skeets" Holland, who merely "sat tight," so to speak, Louray O'Neil set the pace, Dr. Johnson took over without any difficulty and held Valdina Dust safe in the run home. The latter, incidentally, went postward at odds of 27-1 but evidently considerable backing through the wickets was given him for he paid $4.40 for place and $2.20 for third.

The daily double combination of Mrs. L. M. Carver's Buddy V and Mrs. J. Ward's Little Pistol, respective winners of the first and second races, was worth $65.40 for $2.

24-HOUR FORECAST—Little change will take place in the appearance of the Fotocast during the coming 24 hours. Today's maximum temperatures will go in the sultry 90s from the Gulf States to the Central Plains, the Ohio Valley and the Southeast. Weather-wilted residents of these areas are anxiously awaiting the departure of the visiting flow of hot, humid air from the Gulf of Mexico. Those who are familiar with weather patterns know only the southward surge of Canadian air behind a cold air front will bring cooler and drier weather.

Afternoon temperatures will be in the 80s from New England to Virginia and the upper Ohio Valley as warm air flows around the Atlantic high pressure cell. Coolest weather in the Nation will be from the Dakotas to Washington and Oregon where maximum readings will be in the 70s. Air mass and air flow arrows show cool Canadian air flowing around the high pressure cell over Montana and bringing cool weather to these areas.

Most of the U. S. will be partly cloudy with widely scattered showers and thunderstorms from the Gulf States to Wisconsin and Pennsylvania, also along the east slopes of the southern and central Rockies. Rainfall over the eastern sections of the country will occur as warm air from the Gulf of Mexico rises into towering clouds, cools and releases its moisture in the affected areas.

It will be slightly cooler with some widely scattered thundershowers in the eastern sections of the very dry Central Plains as the cold front moves eastward. No appreciable relief is expected since these local showers will evaporate and rapidly disappear in the parched soil. The dry high pressure cell which will follow in wake of the frontal passage should extend the drought period more days. This continued dry weather will increase the po of dust storms in the Plains States and forest fires along the slopes of the southern and central Rockies.

Today's maximum temperature forecasts include Kansas City, Nashville 93; St. Louis 92; Chicago and Detroit 90; Boston, Hartford, Albany, Milwaukee and Cleveland 88; Buffalo 86; New York and Pittsburgh 85; Washington 84 and Philadelphia 83.

'We'll Hold Our Own'

Presidents' Coach Unconcerned About Jinx With Two Veterans for Every Position

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

PAUL MACKEY of Alexandri's George Washington High is a football coach who doesn't worry about that old sophomore jinx.

This is Paul's second year at the helm of the Presidents. Last years' showing was four victories in 10 games.

Mackey is pleased with his 1947 Presidents which open the season a week from Friday against Thomas Jefferson of Richmond.

"We've got lots of experience, we're fast, and even though we don't have a regular weighing over 185 pounds, we'll hold our own against anybody," says Mackey.

Sixteen lettermen are back and, together with other holdovers, give the Presidents seasoned talent two deep at every position.

In addition, two seniors are out for the team for the first time, and their showings in scrimmages have been pleasing. They are Guard Bobby Hooker, Francis Kick and Bill Sweeney hold forth, and at the quarterback slot. The three above mentioned tackles are all capable lettermen, but lack the size, the heaviest weighing only 175.

Leonard Murray, a guard last year, has been moved to quarterback, which calls for a good blocking back in Mackey's single wing attack. Murray is catching on quick and may plug the gap, his coach believes.

Veterans dominate the line with lettermen George Beach, Billy Smith, Don Weatherwax and Johnny Hanback all back. At the guards are holdovers Dan Dudley and Allen Grim. And as snapper-backs, Mackey has Keith McDonald and Ralph Phillips.

Kenny Fones, Bobby Via and Teddy Potts, all from last year's team, are the halfback hopefuls, with Bob Hanna leading the field in the race for the fullback job.

Four newcomers have also shown promise in the backfield. They are Ed Johnson, Clyde Harris, Mike Davis and Johnny Hughes.

Possible weak spots are at tackles where Ed Gallahan, ball team to the State championship who pitched the G. W. High baseship, and Center Billy Rorer who helped spark the Presidents to second place in the State basketball round-robin.

J. B. Smith Seen as Succesor To Lee as Montgomery Leader

An upheaval in the ranks of Montgomery County Democrats, touched off by the surprise resignation of E. Brooke Lee and Lacy Shaw Wednesday, was followed yesterday by the resignation of a member of the organization from her position in the Silver Spring Trial Magistrate's Court.

Meanwhile, political observers in the county yesterday tagged J. Bond Smith, new chairman of the State Central Committee, as the "logical successor" to Lee, long-time "boss" of the Democratic machine. Smith's selection to succeed Shaw as committee chairman makes him virtually the top man in the organization, it was pointed out.

Mrs. Genevieve Wells, a former member of the Maryland House of Delegates, and long active in the county's Democratic machine, revealed she would relinquish her position as clerk in the Silver Spring court Monday, but said emphatically her resignation was "in no way" connected with Lee's resignation.

Smith, an attorney, was named to the committee last May to succeed Judge Alfred D. Noyes, who resigned because he was criticized by Republican leaders for continuing his political activities while serving as judge of the juvenile court. He was elected chairman by committee members following Shaw's announcement of his resignation Wednesday.

Mrs. Wells, who was appointed to the court post by Judge Willaim Wheeler last May, said she would take a 10-day vacation before going to work in the Silver Spring office of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

She served in the House of Delegates from 1942 to 1946. During her term she was appointed as the first woman member of the State Legislative Council.

J. BOND SMITH
County political leader

Party leaders were hesitant to predict whether the organization would follow Lee's indorsement of a charter form of government—a declaration which was almost as big a surprise as his resignation. It was indicated the organization would meet "some time within the next two months" to take a definite stand.

Oil Jury Sits Again Today

Four filling station operators who were excused from testifying yesterday will appear before the special grand jury investigating the petroleum industry today at 10:30 a. m.

The men, whose names were not divulged, were released as the grand jury cut the session short, adjourning at 11 a. m. after only a half hour's work.

W. B. Watson Snyder, special assistant to the Attorney General, in charge of the grand jury presentation, refused to explain the sudden recess.

"It wouldn't interest anybody," he said.

Only one witness was heard yesterday. He was Hubert Peterson, secretary of Retail Gasoline Dealers, Inc., who operates three filling stations in the District.

He told reporters he had been recalled to give additional information about activities of the association.

St. Marys Citizens Denied Use of Their Courthouse

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 10 (Spl).—More than 300 members of the St. Mary's County Civic Association were barred by the County Commissioners tonight from meeting in the courthouse here.

The association early this summer sponsored a successful drive to outlaw slot machines in the county. Twenty three indictments returned in June are slated to go before the Circuit Court here Monday.

The 300-odd civic association members had advertised that tonight's meeting would be to plan further battle with slot machines reported still in operation.

A spokesman for the civic group said use of the courthouse had been denied on the basis of an "old County resolution" which states that a written request must be made before the courthouse may be used as a meeting place by citizens.

Indignant association members, however, asserted that the courtroom has always been open to public use without such written request and that the Commissioners had promised the room would be available tonight.

Trade Charter Plea Voiced

Recruiting of women for professional church work was urged yesterday at the Washington Cathedral.

The recruitment program, part of the Episcopal evangelism project for this fall, was among the recommendations of the conference on "Training of Women for Work in the Church," sponsored by the National Episcopal Council, New York City.

Formation of an association of Episcopal professional church workers also was recommended as a means of raising the standards of the profession. Establishment of a committee to study the theological, social and educational training of women church workers also was urged at the meeting at the College of Preachers.

Leaders of the conference, which adjourned last night, was the Rev. A. Ervine Swift, acting director of the National Episcopal Council's Foreign Missions Department. Dean Charles L. Taylor of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., was chairman of the findings committee.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

The first groups of displaced career people to be given jobs under that tough Civil Service program will be economists, statisticians, accountants and auditors in grades CAF-5 through 13 and P-1 through P-6.

Kluttz

Despite strenuous opposition, the program will go into effect next Wednesday. Agency personnel directors won only one minor point at yesterday's meeting of the Federal Personnel Council—a short delay to give them time to prepare to hire the 1900 career people who have been laid off here.

Meantime, Civil Service officials promised to write the head of each agency a letter spelling out the new program in detail. Also, each agency will be told in the same letter how many displaced economists, statisticians, accountants, and auditors it must hire within a maximum of 40 days.

Those agencies that fail to comply will be ordered to fire three times its quota in war service people. The quota will depend on the number of war service people an agency has, say, in statistical jobs, and the number of jobless career statisticians to be placed.

The commission will then follow up within a few days with other groups of career people to be placed until its list is exhausted.

Upwards of 5700 war service people here could be fired under the commission—three war service for each displaced career worker. However, most of the agencies are expected to fall into line quickly behind the program to prevent the wide-spread firings. In fact, they have no other choice.

One official described yesterday's meeting, where details of the plan were revealed officially, as a "telling-off session." He said agency heads accused the Civil Service Commisison of "fouling up the program" and that similar charges were made by the commisison against the agencies.

Agencies exempted from the compulsory placement program are: Veterans Administration, because it has such a high percentage of veterans; Atomic Energy and the FBI, because they are outside of Civil Service, and the field service of the Postoffice Department.

Meantime, the Commerce Department reported yesterday that it had found jobs this week for 85 displaced career employes, and others would be placed before the week ends. It has taken on more of the jobless career people than any other agency.

LOYALTY: Carl Marzani, the former State Department employe, who was convicted on Communist charges, is to make a series of speeches in Midwest cities in an attempt to stir up opposition to the President's Federal worker loyalty program. The plan is to hail Marzani as a martyr to the cause of freedom.

Marzani is reported to be appearing under the sponsorship of the Civil Rights Congress. The House Committee on un-American Activities recently cited the Congress as a Communist front.

PEOPLE: Capt. Harvey Collisson will retire this week as Interior's coal mine boss and also as an active Naval officer. He'll go into industry . . . Postmaster General Hannegan soon will have that physical exam which will determine his career. The best guess is he'll stay on as Postmaster General and resign as Democratic chairman . . . Dan Wheeler is staff director for that report on our natural resources which Interior Secretary Krug is writing for the President. The report will be completed next week.

VA: No more than 250 employes in its central office here will be fired as of the end of this month. However, the net reduction in employment here since August 1 will be about 700 by that time. The central office was ordered to lay off about 700 employes, its share of the 8000 which had to be discharged the country over because of budget cuts.

The difference between 250 and 700 is made up by resignations, retirements, and transfers to field jobs. More than 100 dismissal notices that were given out at the end of August have been withdrawn.

JOBS: The War Department needs CAF-3 and 4 stenographers for duty in the Pentagon. But you must apply at the Air Forces personnel office at Bolling Field. . . . The Navy Ordnance Plant in Alexandria, at King and Union sts., has these openings: 15 electric welders, sandblaster, and sheet metal worker. Apply to the personnel office there.

NAVY: This weekend the stock control office in its Bureau of Supplies and Accounts will be moved to Philadelphia. About a dozen employes will transfer with their office.

A 22-year-old former Marine now recuperating from a fractured leg and thigh is living proof that love has absolutely no effect on the law of gravity.

At 12:30 a. m. yesterday, James H. Davis of 1381 Irving st. nw., proposed to his girl and slipped an engagement ring on her finger. That bouyant feeling a fellow gets on such an occasion grew and grew.

And at 3:15 a. m., while Davis was walking the girl home, the feeling got just a little too strong. He jumped up to swing on a tree limb in the 1300 block of Harvard st. nw., and—wham! That's how he suffered the fractures.

The fiancee, Miss Marion Schubert, 20, of 1336 Harvard st. nw., is an employe of the Washington Automotive Trades Association. She is still a little stunned by it all, but said the accident won't interfere too much with their plans, since no wedding date has been set.

"I feel terrible about the accident," she said, "but I'm glad we're engaged."

She said that she was walking with Davis, when he suddenly jumped and grasped the limb, slipped and announced that he had probably broken something.

An ambulance attendant who took Davis to Emergency Hospital related Davis said, "I thought I was walking on air."

Davis' leg was treated at Emergency, and he was then taken to Mount Alto Hospital, to be transferred to the Naval Hospital in Bethesda.

Miss Schubert said Davis was a former Marine sergeant, 6 foot 3 inches and 180 pounds of Marine sergeant at that. She said she met him just two months ago yesterday.

She said Davis was employed in afrozen custard establishment.

Court Orders Recount of Fairfax Vote

Drawing to Settle Tie for House Seat Voided by Judges; Ruling Due Sept. 24

By The Associated Press

Th Democratic nomination for a Fairfax County House of Delegates seat, decided once by lot, is back in a disputed status and will remain so until September 24.

The three-judge court considering the contested Democratic nomination Tuesday designated a special commission of three to recount the August 5 primary ballots and report the result September 24.

After an official vote count in the primary race showed incumbent Edwin J. Lynch and Robert J. McCandlish jr. tied with 2853 votes each, McCandlish filed a petition for an official recount. Meanwhile the State Board of Elections held a drawing in Richmond. Lynch's name was drawn from a hat and he was declared the party nominee.

The new court ruling supersedes all previous rulings on the matter.

Sitting with Judge Paul E. Brown to hear the case were Judges Floridus S. Crosby and Lemuel J. Smith, both of whom were named with Judge Brown by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals as a special court.

In allowing the recount, the three-man group appointed three commissioners, Mark Turner, Forrestville; T. J. Stockton, Fairfax, and Charles O'Shaughnessy, Baileys Crossroads, to make the recount and report the result.

Fairfax Road Hopes Raised After Tour

Fairfax County officials held out the hope for an increase in future State allocations for secondary road construction yesterday, following a tour of the county's road system by officials of the State Highway Department.

Heading the list of officials on the tour, which took in secondary roads in all six magisterial districts, was Gen. J. A. Anderson, head of the State Highway Department.

Others were H. B. Rogers, member of the highway commission from the northern Virginia area; C. S. Fullen, chief engineer for the department; R. I. Mount, district highway engineer; J. H. Phillips, resident engineer for Fairfax County and E. H. Orange, assistant resident engineer.

The State officials were accompanied by members of the county board of supervisors, R. M. Loughborough, executive secretary; T. J. Stockton, county planning engineer, and J. J. Corbalis, consulting engineer for the Fairfax Planning Commission. Several county residents also joined the tour.

Principal purpose of the tour was to familiarize the State commissioners with the county's road problems, and no immediate recommendations are expected as a result of the survey, according to county officials.

However, the State allocations are now based on 1940 population figures and a 1939 traffic count, it was pointed out, and the county group expressed the hope that the tour had convinced the State officials that those figures do not represent a true picture. A new traffic count for the county is scheduled for next year, although there will be no change in the official population figures for the area until the next census in 1950.

Md. Tobacco Crop Double That of 1926

All-Time Record Production Sold At 95% Higher Prices, U. S. Finds

By The Associated Press

Southern Maryland's all-time record 1946 tobacco crop, which disappointed many farmers because it brought lower prices than expected, was more than double production of 20 years ago and brought 95 per cent higher prices.

These facts were revealed in a survey of Agriculture Department statistics yesterday. The study also showed that the market for the Free State's tobacco has shifted from chiefly foreign to predominantly domestic.

Frmo 1924 to 1928, southern Maryland—the tobacco section—produced 24 million pounds yearly. Of this, 14 million pounds, or 58 per cent, was exported each year. The average price during these years was 23.4 cents.

The 1946 crop of more than 48 million pounds averaged 44.7 cents a pound in this year's auctions, recently closed. The Agriculture Department estimates approximately six million pounds or about 12 per cent will be exported in 1947.

1945 Crop Was Short

Most tobacco growers had hoped the 1947 auction prices would approximate last year's 57 cents average.

An Agriculture spokesman pointedout, however, that the 1945 crop—sold in 1946 auctions—was a short one, of only 18,500,000 pounds.

The record crop this year was one factor in the drop in prices. He pointed out, too, that recent high prices, such as 55.5 cents in 1944 and 56.5 cents in 1942 were "wartime" prices and that the highest prewar price in the State was 27.7 cents a pound in 1929. Another factor, he said, was lower exports.

Exports Averaged 9,600,000

Shipments abroad averaged 9,600,000 pounds in 1939 and never went over 2,500,000 pounds from then to 1944. In 1945 they picked up to 2,900,000 pounds and last year jumped to 6,400,000 puonds.

The general economic situation abroad, including the widespread dollar shortage, is expected to lower exports this year, the spokesman said. For the first seven months of 1947 they total three million pounds against 3,800,000 the first seven months of last year.

Although the war cut off a share of the State's tobacco market, it encouraged use of Maryland's production by domestic cigarette manufacturers as supplies of imported Oriental types fell off.

The Maryland leaf, considered to have a neutral flavor, is classified as desirable also because of slow and even burning qualities.

40 Million Pounds Sold this Year

More than 40 million pounds were sold this year at the auctions which 10 years ago largely replaced the hogshead market in which buyers sampled the leaf and made their offers. Another four million pounds has been shipped to the remaining hogshead market in Baltimore and the Agriculture Department estimates a similar amount is still held on tobacco farms.

As for the 1947 crop, Agriculture estimated as of August 1 it would run around 34,500,000 pounds.

Flue-cured tobacco grown in other sections this year was second in amount only to last year's record crop. Prices are running 15 per cent lower than last year, however, at current sales.

The 1947 burley crop is about 18 per cent below last year in amount, the department said. It doesn't go to market until December but it is expected to bring higher prices than in 1946.

Man Held For Murder In Woman's Death Here

Triangle Tragedy Follows Drinking Bout; Husband Identifies Victim

Nixon N. McGuire, 36-year-old truck driver, was being held in District Jail last night without bond, charged with the first degree murder of Mrs. Theodore J. Rowell.

He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday afternoon within an hour after Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg said Mrs. Rowell died of traumatic hemorrhage of the brain, induced either by a blow or a fall.

Police were led to the slip-clad body of the attractive, 36-year-old brunette, who was a telephone operator at the Shoreham Hotel, at about 2:30 a. m. Wednesday by McGuire. He had gone to the Third Precinct station wearing blood-spattered clothes to tell them he thought there was a dead woman in his apartment.

NIXON McGUIRE
Charged with murder

Husband Identifies Body

Police found the woman in the basement apartment at 1919 I st. nw., lying on a bed and clad only in a slip and brassiere. Her eye was blacked and there was a cut over her lip. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital where she was pronounced dead at 4:40 a. m.

Police then located Troy Rowell, husband of the dead woman, who identified the body at the District Morgue.

From Rowell and McGuire, police pieced together the story of a weird domestic triangle which began about two years ago. Police said McGuire told them he met Mr. and Mrs. Rowell shortly after he came to Washington from Georgia.

At that time, the Rowells had been living together for about 17 years. Eight months ago, Mrs. Rowell left her husband and, according to McGuire, went to live with him in an apartment. They shared three apartments, including the one at the I Street address, before her death.

Rowell, who is making arrangements to bury his wife, told police yesterday that he had frequently visited Mrs. Rowell after she had left him.

"I would have taken her back in a minute," he said. "You can't live with a woman for 17 years and then forget her."

Police took McGuire into custody on an "investigation" charge early yesterday. He was kept at the Third Precinct Station until the coroner's verdict was issued at about 2 o'clock. He was then taken to police headquarters, where he was questioned for about an hour before his arraignment.

Commissioner Turnage told the tall, lanky murder suspect that he was not required to make any statement at his arraignment. McGuire kept silent. Turnage continued the case until Monday to allow time for a corner's inquest. District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said the inquest will not be held until the police complete their case.

According to police, McGuire denied he committed any crime fn connection with Mrs. Rowell's death. He said that he did not even know Mrs. Rowell was dead until he woke up early yesterday morning, leaned over in bed to kiss her, and found her body cold.

Drinking All Day

McGuire told police that he and Mrs. Rowell had been drinking all day on Tuesday, three or four pints of whiskey and a lot of beer.

Police said McGuire told them that some time late in the afternoon he went to sleep and that after that time Mrs. Rowell left the apartment.

The next thing he knew, he told police, Mrs. Rowell was falling in the apartment door. He said that he tried to pick her up, but dropped her several times.

Police said McGuire told them he finally got Mrs. Rowell on the bed, undressed her except for the slip and brassiere. He then lay down beside her and went to sleep, he said.

Tuck Advises Lottery Money Be Returned

Richmond, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—Organizations now engaged in conducting lotteries of new automobiles or other prizes are being advised by Governor Tuck to give the money back to ticket holders, the chief executive's office said today.

The Governor has been "snowed under" with questions from civic and charitable organizations since his announcement on Monday that raffles and lotteries could not be countenanced. They are in direct violation of a constitutional provision as well as a specific law, the Governor pointed out.

At least one automobile lottery has been called off in view of the Governor's announcement and it was understood that several others which had ben scheduled for late this month and next month had been cancelled. The Governor's office said that several Commonwealth's attorneys had indicated their intention to prosecute if necessary.

In ussuing his warning against lotteries as a device for fund-raising, the Governor said that in most instances charitable organizations or clubs have been conducting the raffles innocently. In other cases brought to his attention, he said, "high pressure promoters" have been grabbing a lion's share of the proceeds.

Tuck Approves Hospital Plan Allocations

Richmond, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—Governor Tuck today approved an allocation of $28,495 to the State Health Department for completion o fthe State-wide hospital survey and the beginning of the construction phase of the program October 1.

At the request of Dr. L. J. Roper, State health commisisoner, the governor granted $4500 to wind up the publishing of the hospital survey report which was approved yesterday by the steering committee of the Virginia Hospital Advisory Council. The master plan will be presented to the full council September 30, and a public hearing on the survey will be held in Richmond October 21.

The Governor also approved today, at Dr. Riper's request, an allocation of $23,925 to cover preliminary engineering, architectural and overall supervisory services on the hospital construction program.

The health commissioner estimated that an annual budget of some $47,850 will be needed to cover these engineering and architectural services. For the nine-month period ending June 30, 1948, the Federal Government will provide a one-third share of $11,962 and the State will put up the remaining two-thirds or $23,925.

Housebreaker Just a 300-lb. Brown Bear

Moundsville, W. Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—Edward Ryan heard a strange commotion in the kitchen when he returned to his home last night, so he immediately armed himself with a shotgun.

Ryan and his wife crept toward the kitchen and they open the door, but just as promptly closed it with a bang. Seated contenedly on the kitchen floor and munching food from the family larder was a 300-pound black bear.

City Patrolmen Russell Clegg and George Hinerman answered Ryan's emergency call and found him keeping vigil at the front door. The policemen entered and Hinerman grabbed a rope trailing from the bear's neck. In the melee the rope broke and Hinerman was scratched.

As the officer drew his revolver to fire, Ryan snatched the bear's collar and the animal meekly submitted to be led to the patrolmen's cruiser car.

Hinerman and Clegg, treating the house-breaker as any other law violator, carted him off to the city jail. But the jailor refused to admit them with their fuzzy prisoner.

The patrolmen had no better luck with Chief of Police J. V. Underdonk who was aroused from bed and offered the privelege of caring for the bear while the officers finished their tour of duty.

The dilemma was solved with the arrival of the owner from a touring carnival, who said the animal escaped last week during a truck breakdown.

Showers, Sun Help Crops In Maryland

Baltimore, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Weather Bureau reported today general showers and warm weather in the first week of September helped crops in Maryland.

For the week ended last Saturday, the bureau noted that benegcial rains between one and two inches fell on most sections and that temperatures reported by most of its recording stations were four to seven degrees above the early September norms.

A severe storm in Kent County last Thursday afternoon did considerable damage to tree fruits and farm buildings.

The bureau's crop review by sections:

Garrett, Allegany and Washington counties—damp and rainy weather again delayed the threshing of small grains in Garrett and Allegany counties. It was good corn weather and the crop is maturing rapidly. Truck crops and gardens are mostly good, although some are excellent and some no better than fair. Sugar corn and tomatoes are moving to canneries abundantly. Thee fruits still being picked in quantity and later varieties are sizing nicely. Pastures are good to excellent and some hay still is being made.

Water Supply Dwindles in 2 Md. Towns

A water shortage of indefinite duration faced some 2000 residents of Gaithersburg and Washington Grove, Md., yesterday as wells started going dry.

First hint of trouble came early yesterday when water was completely cut off for about five hours. Three of the nine wells that supply the two communities were pumping air, officials said. Service was restored by tapping underground storage tanks.

The situation was generally attributed to a "long, hot summer" and scanty rainfall.

Adding to the difficulty was the breaking of a water main about 1 a. m. yesterday. Location of the main still had not been discovered last night.

Approximately 900 elementary and high school students of the Gaithersburg School were told to return home as they reported for the opening classes of the 1947-48 school year.

The towns normally use an average of about 130,000 gallons daily. The three wells which caused yesterday's shortage are "practically dry," a Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission spocesman said, and the other six wells "are gonig down fast."

As the shortage developed, the sanitary commission was in the process of drilling another new well. When it is finished, another will be started.

An official said residents were being asked to eliminate all unnecessary uses of water for "an indefinite period" unless heavy rainfall in the near future provides relief.

Study Slated On Inspection Of Autos in Va.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 10 (AP).—Virginia's motor vehicle inspection system, a subject of widespread criticism, will be under the scrutiny of the Virginia Advsiory Legislative Council and that body will report to the 1948 Legislature as to the possibilities of "some improved method" being devised.

The study and report was requested by Governor Tuck in a letter to Delegate E. O. McCue jr., of Charlottesville, council chairman.

In asking the VALC to look into the present system, whereby private garages and repair shops conduct the inspection in behalf of the State, the Governor's letter noted that Col. C. W. Woodson jr., superintendent of State Police, had prepared information on "a complete plan" for State-owned and State-operated inspection facilities. This plan, including data on costs, personnel and other phases will be available to VALC, Mr. Tuck added.

Asked for his own views on the inspection, Governor Tuck had no comment to add to his letter. He explained that he had not reached any conclusion on the matter and would not do so until the completion of the VALC study.

The Governor did, however, suggest that it might be possible to effect a compromise between the present method used in Virginia which utilized only privately-owned inspection stations, and the other extreme of all State-operated inspections.

In Maryland and Virginia

Maryland and Virginia To Discuss Crabbing

Baltimore, Sept. 10 (AP).—John E. Clark, chairman of the Maryland Tidewaters Fisheries Commission, said today the State will not move to liberalize its crabbing restrictions in Chesapeake Bay until after a conference with Virginia authorities.

Clark had said previously that Maryland regulations might be relaxed because Virginia has fewer restrictions, and this "imposes an unfair burden on Maryland watermen."

The fisheries chairman announced today he will communicate with Charles M. Lankford, jr., Virginia fisheries commissioner, and ask for a bi-State meeting within the next month.

"We want to get Virginia's thinking on the subject," Clark said. "Perhaps their thinking is right, but it makes no difference who is right or wrong as long as the regulations are not uniform."

'The Riggory' Sold

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 10.—The Riggory, one of the old homesteads of Albemarle County, in the Minor family for 124 years, has been sold by its owner, Peter C. Minor, to Mrs. Margaret Flint.

The plantation, on the Stony Point road about 7 miles north of Charlottesville, originally contained 535 acres. The old part of the frame dwelling is believed to have been built about 1800 by John Carr. The place was bought by Peter Minor of Ridgway, around 1824, and was given to his son, Franklin Minor, who established a classical school for boys.

In 1849 Franklin Minor traded The Riggory to his older brother, Hugh, for Ridgway, where he continued the school until a few years before the War Between the States. The new part of the house was built by him about 1849, and the name was suggested at that time by a Scottish carpenter, who grumbled that the site "was naught but a riggory"—that is, a stony spot.

Needs More Money

Baltimore, Sept. 10 (AP).—Dr. Horace Flack, head of the Department of Legislative Reference, informed the Board of Public Works yesterday he needs more money to set up the Bureau of Fiscal Research.

The bureau, authorized by the 1947 general assembly, will serve as a counsel to the Legislature on local finances and on State expenditures.

Dr. Flack said he could not get a competent person to head the bureau at less than $6000 a year. If he paid that, he would have exactly $860 a year left for other expenses of the bureau.

Once the new bureau is set up, the State will have these agencies watchdogging the Treasury: The Comptroller, Budget and Procurement, the Treasurer, Bureau of Revenue Estimates and the Bureau of Fiscal Research.

"You aren't just implement salesmen, any more," Mussell declared. In the new era you are selling service. You must be able to show how new implements will reduce costs and ease the work."

One Driver Freed in Inquest, Jury Can't Agree on Another

After considering two recent traffic deaths yesterday, a coroner's jury exonerated one driver but could not reach a decision as to the responsibility of the second driver.

Meanwhile, police reported five traffic accidents in the District yesterday. There were no serious injuries.

The inquests yesterday were into the deaths of Vaughn Doggett, 36, of 916½ Liberty st. sw., and Harland E. Beck, 44, of 1321 Belmont st. nw., both of whom were struck August 28.

The jury freed Calvin H. Campbell, 16, of 4502 Wilson blvd., Arlington, Va., in the death of Doggett, but could not reach a verdict in the death of Beck, a painting contractor, who was crushed to death by a skidding laundry truck.

Released to Attorney

The driver of the truck, Stanley Day, 44, of 1110 Raum st. ne., was released in the custody of his attorney. Facts in the case will now be presented by police and the coroner's office to the District Attorney for a decision.

At the inquest into Beck's death, police testified that the victim was standing on the sidewalk inspecting a house at 3303 O st. nw., for future painting when the truck mounted the sidewalk and pinned him against the steps of the house. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Day testified it was raining at the time of the accident. He said he was driving along the streetcar tracks because of cars parked on both sides of the 30-foot wide street.

He said his brakes locked when a streetcar stopped ahead of him and that he skidded across the wet tracks and cobblestones and up on the sidewalk.

No Witnesses

Police said there were no witnesses to the accident and told the jury that Day was charged with unreasonable speed and operating after suspension of his permit. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald instructed the jury to ignore the second charge, declaring it had no bearing on the manner in which Beck met his death.

The jury deliberated for more than a hour before announcing it could not reach a verdict. Since inquests are only preliminary hearings to determine if court action should be taken in a death, "hung" coroner's juries are rare, according to the coroner's office.

In the second inquest, the jury ruled Doggett had died because of his own negligence. Police said Doggett suffered a fractured right leg when he fell against Campbell's car while crossing Maine ave. at I st. sw.

He died three days later at Emergency Hospital. An autopsy showed death was due to a combination of the fracture, pneumonia and delirium tremens.

Trucks figured in two of yesterday's traffic accidents, and in one case the truck got the worst of an encounter with a small coupe.

The truck, which was carrying a load of iron was in collision with the coupe at 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se. The truck was toppled over on its side. The front end of the colpe was smashed in.

Police said the coupe was operated by Charles W. Holden, 31, of Piney Branch rd., St. George's Beach, Md., and the truck by Albert C. Gill, 27, of Vienna, Va. Holden suffered a bruise on his forehead. He said h ewould be treated by a private physician.

A truck which police said was driven by James C. Nichols, 29, of 704 3rd st. se., was in collision with an auto driven by Ensign Arthur H. Schmieder, 27, of Ocenia, Va., at 13th and Monroe sts. nw. at about 3:45 p. m.

Schmieder was treated at Garfield Hospital for lacerations of his right knee and a bruised nose after which he was transferred to the Naval Hospital at Bethesda.

Doubleheader Accident

There was a doubleheader accident early yesterday at Rhode Island ave. and 15th st. nw. Police were at the scene investigating an accident involving cars driven by Robert Rohrback, 22, of 3704 Bunker Hill rd., Mount Rainier, Md., and Frank H. Boesch, 30, of 1421 Massachusetts ave. ne., when they heard a loud crash.

The second accident involved cars operated by A. J. Szuhay, 30, of Novelty, Ohio, and William H. Kerr, 24, of 708 N. Overlook drive, Alexandria, Va. No one was injured in either crash.

Nine-year-old James R. Troy of 1623 Montello ave. ne. was treated at Casualty Hospital for slight injuries yesterday after his coaster wagon collided with an auto driven by James F. Dyson, 18, of 1213 Oates st. ne., near Holbrook ter. ne.

Parking Meters Endanger His Liberties, Attorney Holds

If the red marker of a parking meter pops up too soon, his constitutional liberties are threatened, Herbert S. Ward, Washington attorney contended in an Annapolis court yesterday.

Ward, whose law offices are at 1401 K st. nw., Washington, and whose home is at Bay Ridge, near Annapolis, is fighting an overtime parking charge there.

In 1934 Ward successfully fought on principle a somewhat similar case in Washington when the District Traffic Bureau first refused to issue him new auto license tags because of an unsettled overtime parking charge. The iessue was not resolved, however, as Ward meanwhile proved that another, not he, had driven the car the day the offense was committed and the charge was dropped.

Ward's attorney, J. Benjamin Simmons of Washington, summing up testimony yesterday asserted, "You can't take liberties away from a man on the basis of what a mechanical device says."

Trial Magistrate Samuel J. Macaluso fined Ward one dollar and costs, observing that maybe it wasn't the meter's fault, but perhaps Ward had not operated the meter properly."

Ward immediately announced he would appeal.

Pay for Turkey Raid

Winchester, Va., Sept. 10.—The Frederick County Board of Supervisors yesterday approved payment of $158.40 for 44 young turkeys which were killed by the dogs last month on the farm of C. M. Rosenberger near Hayfield.

The claim, which represents a "fair market value" for the 8-pound gobblers, will be paid from the county dog tax fund, most of which is set aside for the payment of damages to stock attributed to stray dogs. The Rosenberg payment represents one of the largest claims paid to a single stock owner in recent months.

Mme. Bonnet Says

Long Skirts No Sensation In Paris

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THOUGH MME. HENRI BONNET, the French Ambassadress, claimed a touch of grogginess after a 27-hour transatlantic flight, to a jaded Washingtonian she looked superbly fresh, wide-eyed and—almost annoyingly—trigly cool.

We got down to the hemline immediately. Ever so often, said Mme. Bonnet, styles change completely, suddenly and there's a surprised outcry from women. The new hemline is nothing sensational, it's hovering around the 1936 level. In Paris, new dresses cover the calf, dinner frocks are ankle length, only grand evening gowns (and there aren't many) touch ground.

Along the boulevards many Parisians still wear short skirts. Clothes are expensive, and they can't discard a wardrobe any more than we can. Besides, with a bread ration cut imminent, worry about skirt lengths pales to insignificance. But life for most Frenchwomen is hard and the new styles do give a lift, something to talk about, plan and, through difficulties, create.

The Fashion Yardstick

THE BASIC style yardstick is: shoulders and waists of your own, skirts either very narrow or very full. Shoes, though still rationed in France, are normal, platformless, not tricked out with fancy cutwork. Bags—and they're particularly handsome this year Mme. Bonnet says—have discarded the over-shoulder strap made to ease package carrying in transportless wartime days.

Paris bonnets are not the overstuffed affairs we've favored lately. In general they're small, off-face, uneven, pulled down over the right ear. There are lots of berets and some numbers look a bit like our army overseas cap.

'Stair Room Only' at Dior's

AMONG THE COUTURIERS, Dior is still most sensationally successful. He's had a break, Mme. Bonnet believes, by opening shop when styles were changing. He started without tradition, while other established couturiers had to adapt slowly so as not to startle steady customers. Still youngish, he came up the hard way, designing first for Piguet, then Lelong, Boussac, a textile manufacturer, backed him. Now they're both a trifle overwhelmed by success.

The medium-sized Dior showrooms on the Avenue Montaigne were so overcrowded that at first Mme. Bonnet had to sit on the stairs. Marlene Dietrich, Merle Oberon, half a dozen other stars were sardined among the buyers.

Incidentally, the Dior perfume, eagerly awaited by style-conscious females, is still "aging." Like wine, it must be bottled awhile to test time effect.

Workers Must Be Warm

PARIS PRICES? Yes, they're high but no higher than first class New York dressmakers charge. Clothes can't be cheaper, says Mme. Bonnet, while coal costs $20 to $22 a ton. After all, the thousands and thousands employed making materials, trimmings, dresses, must be warmed while they work.

French magazines, newspapers are filled with ideas of how to do over last season's dresses. Here are a few smart dodges Mme. Bonnet suggests. Insert a contrasting band at the waistline, fit it snug to the hipbone, then it looks an integral part of the dress.

It can be the same material in a contrasting color or, let's say, a velvet band on a wool gown. Do the same thing around the hem. Let it down completely, then face underneath with the new material but be sure not to skimp; remember a ruffle effect is pretty. As for fur coats, Mme. Bonnet thinks it's the time to indulge in a short jacket. If you have a long, straight coat, just hug it up a bit in front and you've got that old Vionnet favorite, the seven-eighths length.

Her Paris Choices

AS FOR MME. BONNET'S wardrobe—she bought a suit and three dresses at Dior, yards and yards of material for spring clothes. The suit's gray-black, not strictly tailored but what the French call couture tailored.

Her afternoon dress (the original was wool) is plain black crepe cut with wonderful intricacy. For receiving at embassy affairs she'll use a full-skirted, ankle-length smoke-gray satin. The two-toned satin evening gown has a straight skirt with bouffant fullness swinging free on each side, a low neckline, but definite shoulder straps.

We didn't get around to asking Mme. Bonnet whether she'd bought a guepiere, minimizer or any such waist squeezing apparatus. A glance at the Ambassadress' "line" assured that such questions would be superfluous!

Summer's Over Socially As Parties Begin Anew

By Marie McNair

HOME from the mountains and home from the seas, guests yesterday at Major and Mrs. Alf Heiberg's cocktail party were greeting each other with the warmth and affection showered on the Biblical prodigal son.

Summer's over—socially, at any rate—when parties appear on the calendar again, although the thermometer denies the fact. Vacations, ended, who's back in town and what they've been doing kept conversation ringing through the high ceiling rooms of the Heiberg's Georgetown house.

It was pretty Christine Cromwell Williams' birthday yesterday, which was the very good reason for her aunt's party.

There was a deep frosted pink and white birthday cake and "poppers" without which no birthday party would be complete. But there were also platters piled high with cold fried chicken, hot biscuits, rosy ham, champagne cocktails on the terrace and a mint bed sprouting from ice for the makings for old fashioned juleps.

The Cromwell clan had gathered for the occasion.

Mrs. Heiberg's brother, Jimmy Cromwell, flew down from New York for his daughter's birthday. Mrs. Heiberg's daughter, Mrs. Edward Tennant, a lovely lady, had come over from Baltimore, bringing her young son with her, and of course, Edward Williams was there to celebrate his wife's twenty-fifth anniversary.

It was the first time I had seen former Senator Joseph Guffey in months. He and Miss Grace Tully, secretary to the late President Roosevelt, had their heads together and its dollars to doughnuts they were discussing Miss Tully's forthcoming book.

Former Senator Henry F. Ashurst was there, captivating the ladies as usual. Col. Robert Guggenheim and Polly, were just back from Sun Valley where they spent the summer and met Senator and Mrs. J. William Fulbright among the vacationers.

Miss Carolyn Nash returned a fortnight ago from France, but went up to Bar Harbor for a week before coming to Washington.

Francine Whitten and Lewis MacCracken who'll be married on the nineteenth, made a good looking pair; Gen. and Mrs. Alexander Surles were getting enthusiastic welcomes from their friends and Mrs. Virgil Peterson who says she's been ill this summer couldn't convince anyone of it, she looked so well.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Graves were there and Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Ansberry, Morris Cafritz, but I couldn't find Gwen. Jimmy Parks spent the summer at Falmouth on the Cape, with visits to Newport and other northern resorts.

Mrs. Gene Carusi's admirers were begging her not to leave Washington when Gene gets his Coca-Cola plant established in Tangier; Mrs. Harold Walker looked soignee in a wide black hat trimmed in ostrich fringe which topped her print frock; Mrs. George Holmes and George Williams made a twosome on the terrace.

Starring Roles Given Women Back Stage

Members of Washington Zonta Club learned yesterday just how much hard work goes on behind the scenes when a play is produced, especially an elaborate costume production. Miss Helen Hoerle, here from New York as advance publicity agent for "Lady Windermere's Fan," which opens with Cornelia Otis Skinner Monday at the National, addressed the group at its weekly luncheon-meeting at the Dodge Hotel.

Preparation for the Oscar Wilde classic, she revealed, entailed extensive research in libraries and museums for authentic costuming and even historical delving as to the identity of the original Lady Windermere.

Miss Hoerle also gave local Zontans an interesting idea of the number of women in the theater who never tread the stage behind footlights. She cited feminine producers, directors, stagehands, etc., whose roles in the theatrical world are frqeuently more important than the star's.

Mrs. Dorothy Scates, president of the club, presided and announced the District Conference of Zonta International will be held in Washington October 25 and 26 with headquarters at the Mayflower. During yesterday's business meeting each member pledged to send one box of food to a needy family in Europe.

Mrs. Mowrer Leaves For Paris Meeting

Mrs. Lillian T. Mowrer, chairman of D. C. Chapter, Women's Action Committee for Lasting Peace, left New York by plane yesterday for Europe, where she will represent the organization at the Women's World Fellowship Conference to be held in Paris the latter part of this month.

The nonsectarian, nonpolitical assembly will be presided over by Mme. Georges Bidault, wife of the French Foreign Minister.

Before going to Paris Mrs. Mowrer will visit London and make a short tour through the Netherlands, Belgium and Switzerland. Until her return in mid-October, Mrs. Evelyn Buckley will direct activities of the Washington Chapter, Women's Action Committee.

Luncheon Parties Tomorrow Will Honor Wives Attending Statistical Meetings

Mrs. Donald C. Stone, Mrs. Franklin Ford, Mrs. Paul Wiers and Mrs. Leo Pasvolsky have been added to the list of hostesses who are entertaining at luncheon tomorrow for wives of delegates to the International Statistical Conferences.

In the afternoon, A. D. K. Owen, who is the Assistant Secretary General in Charge of Economic Affairs of the United Nations, will entertain at a reception from 5 to 7 at the Shoreham Hotel for all delegates and their wives. Receiving the guests with Mr. Owen will be Jan Papanek, acting president of the Economic and Social Council of U. N.; Herbert Marshall, chairman of the Statistical Office of U. N., and William R. Leonard, acting director of the Statistical Office of U. N.

On Saturday, from 5 to 7, the American Statistical Association will receive delegates and their wives at a reception at the Shoreham. President of the association is the Assistant Secretary of State, Willard L. Thorp. Climax of the week's entertaining will be Sunday. There will be a 78-mile tour of nearby Maryland farms, ending with tea at the estate of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Small.

Dr. Alfaro Arriving From Panama

Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, former President of Panama and one time Minister to the United States, is expected to arrive this week from Panama to join Senora de Alfaro who is visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weller. Dr. Alfaro is a delegate to the U. N. and while he is attending sessions, Senora de Alfaro will divide her time between Washington and New York.

Regatta Chairman To Give Luncheon

Mrs. Lorton Sims, chairman of the Regatta Ball to be held at the Statler Saturday, September 20, will entertain at luncheon Monday at the Mayflower for Mrs. Julius Krug, wife of the Secretary of the Interior. Secretary and Mrs. Krug's daughter, Marilyn, has been chosen queen of the annual regatta.

Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, whose daughter, Margaret, will be a member of the queen's court, will be among the guests.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married to Nice-Looking, Easy-Going, Steady Man and Sure of His Love, Woman Is Unhappy Nevertheless Because He's Not Demonstrative

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is one of those men who think courtship ends with marriage. I have much to be grateful for: he is easy going, nice looking and a steady worker. But I am very unhappy because, while I'm sure he loves me, most of the time he shows me no affection.

We've talked it over several times and he always promises to do better. He is better for a few days; then he slips back into the old habit of almost ignoring me. I know he dislikes public show of affection, but I am of a very generous loving nature and sometimes he doesn't kiss me for days.

We live with my father, a fact I mention for what it may be worth; we've been married four years and have two small children. All our friends are young couples and I get green with envy when I see a man put his arm around his wife, casually hold her hand or even kiss her in company, just because he loves her and feels like doing so.

Envies Couples Who Held Hands

MY HUSBAND never does that; yet there would be no harm if he did, as our friends would think nothing of it. In fact, they're beginning to notice the lack of it, especially when he sits across the room making teasing wisecracks about my housekeeping, care of the children, the way I spend money, etc. His teasing gets a little brutal at times and it hurts.

I love him but this attitude of his makes me jumpy and miserable. I'm frightened that our marriage will end in disaster because of it. Oddly enough, he doesn't see himself at fault. He just thinks it's a crackpot notion of mine when I mention it,—which I don't like to do, as I always feel I'm forcing his affection. Am I asking too much after four years' marriage? Please advise. D. R.

Man's Attitude Is Ambivalent

DEAR D. R.: Students of American character say that American men have an ambivalent attitude toward women. In other words, their feelings about women are strongly conflicted between the two opposites of love and dislike.

Their dislike of women has its origin, we hear, in instinctive irked resistance to the idea—or early experience—of being nagged, driven, molded, curbed, etc., by the woman who thus "takes advantage" of their love for her, and who acts as if their special devotion to them gives her proprietary right to do so.

It appears that your husband's attitude is a case in point. His behavior is decidedly ambivalent. On the one hand, it seems he loves you after his fashion and tries to please you—as witness his strenuous efforts to "do better" for a few days, when you chide him for cold shouldering your heart hunger.

On the other hand, his derisive attitude in company is an indirect way of "ventilating" dislike of certain aspects of your personality. More than that, it's a device for "getting even" with you for making him feel uncomfortable,—as you do when you privately lecture him for being an unsatisfactory lover-companion.

Man's Inhibited, Wife Is Infantile

NOTHING offends a man more than to be taken to task for failure to love satisfactorily. Though he may evince no indignation when privately taxed on that score, eventually his hidden rancor will out in terms intended to punish his critic,—hence your husband's cruel needling of you at parties.

As matters stand, there is reason to fear that your marriage may end in disaster if the present drift continues. But your husband's taciturn temperament is a defect no worse than your doleful nagging about it. Where he is severely inhibited, lacking the talent for graceful expression of sentiment, you are bleatingly infantile.

Actually you haven't got a generous loving nature. Emotionally you're not mature enough for that. If you were, and felt sure of his love—as you say you do—you'd accommodate kindly to his reserve: and in return, his tone and glance would often express tender appreciation of your sensibility, even though he seldom waxed romantic. For help talk things over with your family physician. Basically, this is a problem of sexual maladjustment. M. H.

While Women Wait—

LONG a forgotten figure in the fashion world is the expectant mother, who often must suffer through her long period of waiting in unbecoming, ill-fitting clothes. At a fashion show yesterday on the Washington Hotel roof she saw herself as she has a right to look—trim, neat, tastefully gowned

Two of the moderately priced costumes from the collection are modeled by two women above, who themselves are waiting the stork's visit. At left, a pearl gray crepe afternoon frock with modified sweetheart neckline studded with silver nailheads. The medium-heeled shoes are of soft kid matching the leather handbag

Her companion wears a black crepe which features long sleeves and an attractive high neckline with marquisette yoke. Both dresses have adjustable waistlines and front fullness in the skirts. Dresses, shoes and bags are available at local shops

Not Too Much Sun

Every now and then we like to give the silk underwear a drying out of doors, regardless of the sun fading the delicate colors. Hang the garments on the line and then stretch one of the white linen pieces straight along the side turned toward the sun. The silk will be protected from the heat of the sun and yet will dry with that lovely scent to it which comes from outdoor drying.

Ask Anne

Your Questions On Homemaking

1. We are building a summer cabin from oak and elm logs. After they are peeled, what preparation is applied to seal against termites?

2. Isn't there an acid which will hasten complete rotting if applied to stumps?

3. How may roaches be eradicated from a gas stove and kept out of curtain rods? M. B. E.

1. Painting with a solution of 5 per cent pentachlorathenol (sold under a trade name by a paint store on C st. nw.) will protect logs from termites. This works much better on seasoned logs than green ones, however. Suggestions on constructing buildings to guard against termites will be found in Farmer's Bulletin 1911 or in Leaflet AIS-30, both issued by and obtainable from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

2. Attempts to hasten wood decay with chemicals haven't proved satisfactory, even under laboratory conditions. Since decay is caused by fungi, the only thing to do is to let nature take its course, or have the stump pulled up by the roots.

3. A combination of dusting and spraying with DDT preparations is said to give the best results in fighting roaches. Use these chemicals around but not on the stove. Just keep the latter as free of grease and other food as possible so it won't attract roaches. Using a small hand dust gun, force 10 per cent DDT powder into cracks and crevices around the room where roaches may hide. Spray floors, cupboards, drawers and other surfaces with 5 per cent DDT oil solution. Stop up the ends of the curtain rods with rolls of paper so the roaches won't seek refuge there.

Men Should Be Pleased

Ladylike Ways Go With New Styles

By Peggy Preston

MEN just don't know what they're talking about when they object to longer skirts for women.

That's no editorial opinion, mind you. It's the advice of that extremely feminine young miss, Haila Stoddard, star of the "Voice of the Turtle," which is showing this week at the National Theater.

"Why the boys are way off the beam," declared slim Miss Stoddard with a swish of her full, pleated skirt that was hugging her pretty legs just a few inches above the ankle. "Don't they know that longer hemlines are a forerunner of the very thing they've been clamoring for—more womanly behavior in members of the feminine sex?"

This is the way Miss Stoddard figures it.

Ladies Returning

What a woman wears has an influence on how she acts. Now what happens when she lets down her hemline, draws in her shoulders and waistline? She becomes more ladylike, that's what! After all, a girl can't be much of a tom boy in a long skirt.

"Why who can tell," Miss Stoddard mused. "If this new idea of dress continues women may become so utterly feminine that they'll retire blushingly from the business field and go back to the homes and the kitchens. Now, isn't that exactly what the men are always advocating?"

But then, whoever said men were consistent, anyhow?

Moreover, Miss Stoddard thinks men are secretly beginning to like the longer skirts. They make women more graceful, cause her to feel and look taller, slimmer and make her want to walk prettily. Then there is the never-to-be-forgotten rule of the theater—you can have too much even of a good thing. And that goes for legs, too. Remember how the boys used to crane their necks for a glimpse of a well-turned feminine ankle? Well, it can happen again.

Miss Stoddard herself is thoroughly enjoying the new styles, as well as the commotion they are causing. She is shedding no tears over the death of those heavily padded shoulders and short, tight skirts that climbed up into the lap every time a girl tried to sit down gracefully.

Wardrobe Has Yardage

Haila's fall wardrobe boasts plenty of skirt yardage. It was made for her by a 21-year-old designer, Jon Derro of New York, and she is wearing it in her current play.

"Everything is long, full and perky," she said. "And that's the way I like it."

When interviewed she was wearing a navy blue and white suit. The pleated skirt, made of about 10 yards of wool gabardine, reached to within a few inches of her ankle. A tiny bolero jacket had a flare of identical pleats in the back and with it she wore a candy stripped silk blouse with long full sleeves, and no shoulder pads. A breton sailor, little white gloves and blue wool pocketbook completed her costume.

Fabrics at Hand for the Home Offer Novel Decorative Effects

Miraculous decorative effects can be achieved through the imaginative use of fabrics in the home.

Valuable information on how to use fabrics to bring about arresting decorative effects in your home is contained in an article in House Beautiful which states in part:

"With fabrics so scarce for four years, you may have forgotten the miracles you can work with yard goods. But now it's time to remember, for stores' shelves are again filling up with plenty, and you can wallow in a multitude of choices until you are confused but happy.

"Your problem now will be to remember all the fabric tricks you used to know about. Remember the feats of optical deception that you achieve by combining plains with patterns. Remember the expensive look you used to get by cutting out parts of a pattern to use as valances or borders. Or the so-simple device of centering a repeat smack in the middle of a chair seat with another one in the center of the back. Remember what fun it was to 'paper' the wall with the same fabric you used for draperies?

"Remember that rich-as-Croesus look you achieved by quilting plain fabrics as well as patterned?"

It is a truism that the best decorators squeeze every ounce of decorative value out of every yard of goods.

Young Brazil Looks to N. Y. For Fashions

By Frank L. Dennis

Rio de Janeiro (By Mail).—Brazil is a great future market for clothing, both for men and for women.

Right now the older women continue to look to Paris for fashion leadership, but the younger ones look to New York. France still provides the pattern for Brazilian women's winter wear, but America is the source of women's summer wear.

"The French just don't know anything about sports clothing," Mrs. Aloyisius de Salle told an interviewer. "They don't know what to do with cotton clothing."

Mrs. De Salle, herself one of Rio's best-dressed women, the former Peggy Healey, a one-time Powers model born in Winthrop, Mass., prefers Paris hats and dresses for most occasions to American wear, despite a profound loyalty to the United States.

"We like the individual creation," she explained. "That is what one gets from France."

Paris Challenged

Her friend, black-eyed, piquant Mrs. Walter Quardos, said she did not see how France could hold the leadership in fashions for South Americans that has been traditional.

"The French just don't have it any more," she said. "They lost something during the war and haven't got it back." She and Mrs. De Salles were in a party of five Rio women and their husbands who were in Paris last summer. They all came back with lots of Paris hats, and patterns of French design which they caused to be copied by Rio dressmakers.

Senhor De Salles, a Rio publisher who saw the blue-eyed Peggy Healey when she modeled in Rio and followed her to New York, said that America is certain to furnish more and more men's and women's clothing to Brazil.

Men Seek Ready-Mades

"Men's clothing is made here, but most men's suits are made to order," he said. "No longer, with the prices getting higher, can Brazilians have so many tailor-made suits. We will have to have the ready-made ones in our stores, made in America or with machinery brought from America.

"So with our women. There is a great market for mass-produced American garments here. Not many women can afford Paris prices."

It was agreed by many young matrons in a group at the Copacabana Palace Gold Room that the French designers know better than Americans how to create styles suited to the shorter, usually plump Latin-American woman.

"But there is no reason why Americans cannot create for us as well as for themselves," Mrs. Quadros said.

The society set in Rio as in America runs to vivid hats, like confections, and colorful clothes. Street wear is dark, usually suits.

Give All a Chance

When life has been deceitful and . . . The world has seemed so wrong . . . It is no simple task to trust . . . The one who comes along . . . It does appear that everyone . . . Is greedy as can be . . . And it is not so easy to . . . Accept sincerity . . . And yet there are more loyal hearts . . . And faithful souls in life . . . Than there are individuals . . . Who cause eternal strife . . . We may be disillusioned but . . . We should not be content . . . To judge the world by those who show . . . A selfish sentiment . . . We should not let our doubting hearts . . . Be guided by a glance . . . But we should keep an open mind . . . And give them all a chance.

Investigation Asked On Help in Home

Philadelphia, Sept. 10 (AP).—The International Council of Women thinks national governments should do something about the shortage of baby sitters, maids, cooks and other household assistants.

To make that view official, the council in its third session today drew up a resolution recommending establishment of national home service institutes or boards to investigate, plan an organize "the best form of education, training, registration and employment conditions for home assistants."

An unscheduled speaker at today's meeting of more than 1000 delegates was Princess Achrof Pahlavi, daughter of the Shah of Iran. She appealed for universal support of the Red Cross.

Hadassah Installs Miss Dorothy Deskin

Miss Dorothy Deskin, recently returned from a month's training in Zionism at the Brandies Camp Institute, was installed as president of Junior Hadassah last night when the organization held its first meeting of the season.

Other officers installed were Misses Elaine Langerman, Doris Rosoff and Edith Laporte, vice presidents; Miss Hannah Pitt, financial secretary; Miss Janice Slugman treasurer, and Miss Min Zigmond, recording secretary.

Designing Bridegroom Whips Up Trousseau

PATRICIA Ann Mahoney of 1701 West Virginia ave. ne. is a mighty lucky lass. She's about to be married and she's not bothering her pretty head one whit with shopping for a bridal gown or trousseau. And why should she, now, with a fellow named Patrick Clark of 2610 22d st. ne. her "intended," designing her wardrobe right down to the last hook and eye?

It all began when Patricia, who will be married September 20, went looking for a wedding gown. Only one she found she liked cost $250. That did it.

Patrick, who had been studying at Madga School of Dress Design, reasoned he could make her a dress that suited her better for a third the cost. And, besides, there's no time like the present to teach your future wife the value of thrift.

Patricia was entranced with the dress, and Patrick was so encouraged he set to work on the entire trousseau. Two of his original sketches are pictured here. At right, the wedding gown of regal brocatelle with double-row bustle atop a slight train. The going-away suit, at left, is of wool gabardine and adaptable for spring or fall wear.

Baby Needn't Stay Spoiled Even If He Rules Roost Now

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When there are a number of persons in the home to look at, talk to and amuse the baby, it is difficult for him to become independent of such attentions. The child plays but some adult is a part of such play and to entertain himself becomes almost impossible.

Soon, he screams if he is left alone for a moment just as does the baby who is in the exclusive company of an attentive mother. There is always a grandmother, aunt or someone to come running to entertain and pacify him.

"My baby isn't satisfied to stay in his playpen," writes Mrs. C. A. "We live with my mother and he gets more than his share of spoiling from mother, sister and brother.. They adore him. He likes people and will make up to strangers easily.

"But, when I am busy and can't keep an eye on him—and he gets into everything—I have had to let him cry and he cries so long and hard that I am afraid he will ruin his vocal chords.

"So, now, I go to him when he cries but he is spoiled and I would like to correct it before he gets too bad. He is 13 months old."

You can taper off the attentions gradually without making him cry to right the situation. When you must be in some other part of the house, put his playpen where he can see out of doors and watch the activities of you or some other person. Too often a pen is stuck into the corner of a room where all the child can see are blank walls.

When he cries go up to him, sit by the pen a moment but do not talk or play with him, just let him feel your presence. Walk away again, and come back at intervals whether he cries or not. If a child feels confidence that you are near, he is less apt to cry than if he feels alone and abandoned. If you sing in another room he will know that you are there and be contented.

None of this is constant behavior, so don't worry that because he is a little spoiled now this is bound to be his disposition later. New interests subtract from his need for your presence. Meanwhile, I wouldn't allow him to cry himself exhausted just to discipline him.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Pauley Seen About To Slide Into Job

By Drew Pearson

It now looks as if charming, go-getting Ed Pauley, the California oil man who has long aspired to be Undersecretary of the Navy, is about to slide into an even better job.

Ickes

No man in all the turbulent days of Trumanism created such a rumpus as Ed Pauley when, last winter, his naval ambitions were abruptly stopped by "The Old Curmudgen," Secretary of the Interior Ickes. It caused Ickes' exit from the Cabinet and Pauley's name to be withdrawn.

The Republicans, however, were extremely happy. They were able to hold their noses over the smell of oil, and point to the fact that Democratic Treasurer Pauley had raised several hundred thousand from oil men to select Truman. Also they were able to block Truman's reward to the man who not only raised money, but ran back and forth like a squirrel between the platform and the floor of the Democratic Chicago Convention buttonholing delegates for Truman.

Pauley's pal who sponsored him for Undersecretary of the Navy was the Secretary of the Navy himself, Jim Forrestal. Today Forrestal sits as top dog over the entire Army and Navy. So the ways are all greased for Ed to slide into the new national defense setup. In fact, he has already started sliding.

Pauley has now been given a quiet job alongside Secretary of War Kenneth Royall. Very little is said about it, but the oleaginous Ed has an office close to Royall's and is doing part of the work ordinarily done by the Undersecretary of War.

Furthermore, the new Undersecretary of War, Gen. William Draper, is handling the job of the Assistant Secretary, not the Undersecretary. And since Draper is a Dillon, Read Banker—the firm once headed by Secretary of National Defense Forrestal—it should be an easy matter, when the time is ripe, for Forrestal to shift Draper back to Wall Street, and Ed Pauley in as Undersecretary.

Pauley's present assignment is informal, does not need Senate confirmation. But after he has been there a few months, Senators are likely to be lenient toward a man who is on the job and can say that he is working his way up.

Moral: In politics the hand is sometimes quicker than the eye.

Merry-Go-Round

The admirals are up in arms over plans of Defense Secretary Forrestal to move the Navy into the War Department's Pentagon Building. It means they will have to commute all the way to Virginia, and many of them live on the other side of town in Maryland . . . Virginia real estate booming as a result . . . Secretary Forrestal's office in the Pentagon Building will be that of the Undersecretary of War. Alongside it is Gen. B. B. Somervell's office. But the irreverent Forrestal is now transforming this plain inner sanctum into a kitchen (he calls it a "galley"). There is about a dozen other private kitchens in the Pentagon, from any of which Forrestal could get food, but he is having his own kitchen built instead . . . Jimmy Roosevelt and Henry Wallace hatched private political medicine at an off-the-record luncheon this week . . . Washington society is amused and fascinated by Helen Lombard's book "While The Fought telling what the women folk did while their husbands were away.

Eisenhower Boom Booms

Two interesting things are happening to the Presidential boom of General Ike Eisenhower:

1. Ike himself is still playing down the boom, accepting no bows, refusing radio hook-ups; 2. Despite this, more and more big politicos are getting on Ike's bandwagon.

Eisenhower is scheduled to speak at the University of West Virginia in Morgantown on September 23 and President Irvin Stewart offered him a national radio hook-up to carry his speech to the country. Ike, however, refused. Then President Stewart proposed a local West Virginia radio broadcast. Again the chief-of-staff declined.

But whether he likes it or not, various political bigwigs are rapidly climbing aboard the Eisenhower bandwagon. Originators of the Eisenhower boom were ex-candidate Alf Landon of Kansas and rotund Roy Roberts, astute editor of the Kansas City Star.

Today, various other GOP big shots who don't like Dewey and who are afraid Taft has killed himself with the Taft-Hartley Act, are looking toward Eisenhower. Latest is the Sun Oil Co.'s Joe Pew of Pennsylvania, who has never liked Dewey, and who has just commissioned ex-Congressman Charles Hawkes of Wisconsin to take a political scouting tour. Hawkes has been ordered to talk up Eisenhowever to GOP leaders throughout the country and start a grass-roots movement for the General.

Note: Only trouble with Joe Pew's support is that he's never picked a winning candidate yet—not even in GOP conventions. No wonder Eisenhower is playing it modest.

Henry Wallace Pledge

Henry Wallace's latest third-party scare coincided with a strong backstage bid for liberal support. His former associate, C. B. Baldwin, circulated a form indorsement among liberal Senators and Congressmen, urging them to sign on the Henry Wallace bandwagon. Strongly worded, the mimeographed pledge declared:

"You (Wallace) are the true spokesman for the millions of liberals who are now uniting to demand a return to the program of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt . . . You are the logical leader for the new grouping of liberals which is now taking place spontaneously, whatever its eventual form may be. We pledge our support to you in the effort to restore liberalism to the domestic and foreign policy of the United States."

At the bottom was a blank line for the indorsing signature.

Even the most liberal Senators and Congressmen, however, are not biting. Most are ignoring Baldwin's letter or else returning the forms with a polite refusal.

Capital Chaff

Bob Hannegan recently told his old political enemy, Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, that Snyder's Treasury Department has cooperated better with the Democratic National Committee than any other agency in Washington . . . One former bureaucrat doing an A-1 job is Josiah DuBois, now handling the I. G. Farben trials in Germany. Lawyers describe DuBois' opening statements at Nuernberg as historic . . . Able Creekmore Fath has quit the Democratic National Committee to practice law in Texas. If Congressman Lyndon Johnson moves to the Senate, Fath will run for his seat . . . Secretary of National Defense James Forrestal has a special electronic machine that signs most of his personal letters.

Johann Waltzes Us 'Round Again

By Richard L. Coe

"I'M LOOKING FORWARD," said Mrs. Leonidas K. Slewfoot, "to your review of 'The Great Waltz'."

"Re-reveiw is what I'm calling it, Mrs. Slewfoot. It's pretty weak as a term, especially since M-G-M is calling it a "masterpiece reprint.' I wish I could think of a reviewing term more fitting for covering these reissues, revivals and "masterpiece reprints" the Nation's theaters are currently specializing in."

"Have you critics agred on a policy to cover the return of old hits such as the Capitol is presenting this morning?"

"You know we critics never agree on anything, Mrs. Slewfoot. You will never appreciate the difficulties of the United Nations unless you become part of what is charmingly referred to as the critical fraternity."

"Do you mean that I've gone and bought The Washington Post and you're not going to tell me a thing about 'The Great Waltz'?"

"On the contrary, madame, if you will shut your big trap for a few minutes I will tell you something about 'The Great Waltz,' ridiculous as it is to criticize a film first released nine years ago. There is little more absurd than that, and no one knows it better than the movie moguls."

"Certainly you can't find much to criticize in 'The Great Waltz'."

"Again, madame, on the contrary. The music is lovely, the Albertina Rasch dances are rollocking and the director, Julien Duvivier, has certainly used real inspiration in several of his scenes. Remember the 'Tales of the Vienna Woods' sequence—how Miliza Korjus and Fernand Gravet are driving in the woods at dawn and the melodies come to them?"

"Indeed I do. And how he looks out on the river and composes 'On the Beautiful Blue Danube!' Oh, I thought that was wonderful."

"Quite right, you are, too, Mrs. Slewfoot. Those are swell examples of imaginative movie-making. But, alas, so too is the plot."

"Whatever do you mean?"

Famous Father's Son

"Well, Mrs. Slewfoot, would you have known from the picture that there were two Johann Strausses and that the one Gravet plays in the film is the son of another waltz master whose tunes also delighted Vienna? Think of the dramatic conflict the story might have evolved in this greater-son-than-his-father approach."

"Again, Mr. Coe, you seem to have been asleep. Don't you remember that at the beginning of the picture there is a line stating that the story is made 'in the spirit rather than the facts' of the hero's life?"

"I do indeed, my poisonous friend, and that's just what I'm driving at. A lot of people are going to think they know all about Johann Strauss, Old Vienna and Franz Josef after they've seen 'The Great Waltz.' What they'll actually know is Sam Hoffenstein's and Walter Reisch's typewriter vaporings. Why, with a ready-made story, do they have to cook one up?"

"I'm afraid you'll never really understand the movies, Mr. Coe. History and facts are all very well for dull old fogies like yourself. But you can't expect to entertain people with a lot of stuff that really happened. It's just not dramatic."

With Luise Rainer

"I suppose you think it's better drama for the composer to marry a pastry cook's daughter, as he does in the picture, than to have married an opera singer, as he did in real life."

"Oh that. That's old stuff. They do that in every picture. I think it's very sweet that Luise Rainer plays a pastry cook's daughter. Anyway, composers don't marry singers."

"Johann Strauss did."

"Very corny." Mrs. Slewfoot picked up her reticule and prepared to leave. "I'm sorry," she grunted, "to find you in so nasty a frame of mind."

"I didn't think I was being nasty. I simply said that I liked the music and dancing in 'The Great Waltz,' but that I thought the story was lou—er, inept."

"Well," she snorted. "Nobody in Hollywood's going to care what you think. The picture's already made lots of money and will make more as a masterpiece reprint. And anything you say about it now is pointless."

"Mrs. Slewfoot," I said, "you're so right."

TOMORROW: We review "Life with Father," at Warner's, formerly the Earle.

BACK AGAIN: Mary Hatcher, who's been playing the lead in London's "Oklahoma!" is one of Paramount's bets as a future star in "Variety Girl," reopening this morning at the Columbia

Bette Introduces Another Davis to the Warner Lot

Hollywood—Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, jr., who expects her third child within five weeks, has given all of her specially made maternity dress to Deborah Kerr. Douglas is leaving soon for New York, but will be back here in time for the birth of the baby. . . . Bette Davis introduces another Davis in "The Winter Meeting." He is handsome Jim Davis, until six months ago under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. But Metro had too many male stars and Jim never got a chance. But Bette, who's given so many youngsters breaks, offered him the chance after she looked at dozens of tests. What do you bet that the first thing the brothers Warner try to do will be to change Jim's last name? . . . Fred Astaire tells me he's anxious to get back to acting. He's considering doing a picture with Ginger Rogers, also a Jerry Wald story based on the life of about a theatrical star and pro-Maude Adams—in reverse. It's ducer who prefers teaching talented youngsters in a midwestern college—passing on his own experience to them—to sticking to the bright lights. . . . Fred's dancing schools are doing all right. The one in New York handles 1200 lessons a week. He has three schools in Chicago and others opening in Pittsburgh and Washington, D. C. . . . Gregory Pack is likely to play the male lead in "Walls of Jericho," if arrangements can be made with David Selznick, who has the next commitment on the star. The picture will roll at the end of this month, with Gene Tierney and Linda Darnell in the feminine top spots.

Deborah Kerr

Not Serious

Rosemary Lane and Buddy Westmore have reconciled. Their highly publicized split-up, incidentally, was no more than a lover's quarrel—of which they've had dozens while still remaining in love with each other . . . Hazel Brooks, who made her picture debut in "Body and Soul," talked herself out of a job at Paramount by saying she wasn't the type for a certain role and suggested the gal who was . . . Sam Goldwyn jr. won't forget the party his parents gave him on his twenty-first birthday. A hundred friends came to dine and dance. Sam sr. forgot he was a producer, and remembered only that he was a father, and a might proud one at that. He told me that his son had refused money from a trust fund, which came due on his twenty-first birthday, explaining his actions with: "If I can earn money, I'll know the value of it." Sammy's boss, J. Arthur Rank, cabled his congratulations.

Lana Now Brings Out 'The Curl'

Hollywood.—"The Curl" has hit Hollywood—another Lana Turner innovation.

Especially designed by Sydney Guilaroff, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer hair stylist, it definitely highlights the Turner allure.

From the enthusiastic reception it received on the set, "The Curl" is slated as the next Hollywood rage.

HE'S DEWLIP, but you know him best as Edward Everett Horton, the Olney's final star of the season. Horton, whose screen roles run into the hundreds, is playing "Springtime for Henry" with his own company through Sunday evening at the Capital's summer playhouse. The comedy concerns Henry Dewlip, who thinks his secretary is a dream until she tells him the story of her life. It's light, frothy and fits the Horton talents like the proverbial glove

Beery Fights Tough One

Hollywood.—For a fight scene in M-G-M's "Alias a Gentleman," Wallace Beery squares off with Tommy Garland, one of the West's top-ranking heavyweights, formerly Robert Taylor's stand-in. Beery asked for "someone tough" for the fighter role and when Garland reported, Beery took one look and said, "I'm satisfied!" The resulting film fight, observers said, shows Beery "got what he asked for!"

Too Many Clocks Spoil the Froth

Hollywood.—There are so many clocks used in Paramount's suspence thriller, "The Big Clock," that even the astute property man lost track of the total.

Everything from a score of wrist watches to a two-story high electrical contrivance that shows time in every zone in the world figures in the exciting drama, which stars Ray Milland and Charles Laughton.

The significance of the clocks rests in the fact that each of them marks the passing of the tense minutes as a great net tightens on the killer.

Star Cook

As soon as she completes "Mary Hagen," Shirley Temple plans to enter a Los Angeles cooking school for an advanced course in culinary art. She aspires to become an expert at making crepe suzettes, baked Alaska and other fancy party dishes.

A FRANK STATEMENT BY THE MANAGER OF LOEW'S CAPITOL

WE constantly are asked by our patrons to bring back to our screen great pictures of former years. Two famous American films, "THE GREAT WALTZ" and "GONE WITH THE WIND", are the most asked-for of all.

We are delighted to announce that we have arranged with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, to re-present "THE GREAT WALTZ", with its delightful love story and its charming melodies, for one week starting TODAY

'It's ahead of its time' said many critics when they hailed "THE GREAT WALTZ" on its original presentation. And many people who would have enjoyed it thoroughly, stayed away—believing it was a foreign film (at a time when foreign films were not popular). Still others thought it might be merely a 'pretty operetta', with no action and little drama.

"THE GREAT WALTZ" is neither! A lavish, beautifully mounted production, it was made in Hollywood with all the facilities of the great M-G-M studios. Its love story, told against a background of revolution and intrigue, is as heart-gripping as any which you have ever enjoyed. Its famed melodies (by Johann Strauss II) are an added treat of real delight.

LUISE RAINER, FERNAND GRAVET and MILIZA KORJUS head its cast—superb actors, superb interpreters of melody and emotion. The story of two women who love one man will make your heart beat faster.

Civic Group In Arlington Shuns Bias

With a long look at its own constitution, the Arlington Civic Federation last night sidetracked action that might show partisanship to any of the 10 announced candidates for the first elected school board in Arlington history.

The group held its first meeting of the season in the Lyon Park Community House, with representatives from 34 member bodies present.

Hot debate on federation participation in partisan or political affairs was touched off when Lemuel Banks, chairman of the school committee, asked permission to read the platform of five candidates named last month by the Arlington School Board nominating conference.

Members George Updegrap and William C. Hull promptly objected, pointing out that the group's constitution declares it to be "nonpartisan and nonpolitical."

Member Morton Levy characterized the proposal as "straight politicking," and V. F. Bond declared it would use the body "as a forum in which to advocate certain candidates."

The Greater Arlington Association, which opposed the successful proposal for direct election of board members, has announced a separate slate of school board candidates it will support.

By a vote of 27 to 23, the federation tabled the proposal to hear the platform of the five committee candidates.

At the same time, despite members' objections, three convention candidates were introduced to the federation by M. R. McCormick, chairman of a special committee studying the school board issue. They were Curtis E. Tuthill, Mrs. Edmund D. Campbell and O. Glen Stahl.

Earlier in the day, members of the school board slate picked by the Greater Arlington Association had been termed "school administration stooges" by Oscar R. LeBeau, chairman of the nominating conference which sponsored the convention.

2 Apartment Owners Ask Rent Boosts

Rent boosts were sought yesterday by owners of 41 apartment units at 1439 T st. nw., and 16 units at 307 S st. ne., the Rent Control Administration revealed.

Examiner James G. Tyson heard arguments by R. W. Harris, owner of the T st. apartments, and his attorney, Leonard Hayes, for boosting present $33.50 per month rents to $45 and $51 rents to $67.50.

Tyson took the matter under advisement.

Bruce B. Derrick, owner of the 5th st. property, and his attorney, Arthur C. Katims, sought $5.50 to $6.50 a month increases in a hearing before Examiner Dennis Lane. This would hike $36.50 rents to $42, and $42.50 rents to $49. This case also was taken under advisement.

Randall H. Hagner & Company, real estate agents, announced yesterday they soon would ask for 15 per cent rent increases for owners of 71 units at the Wisteria Apartments, 1101 L st. nw.

In a letter to the tenants, they cited mounting maintenance costs, higher real estate taxes and new elevator installations as "fair and equitable" reasons for higher rents. They asked tenants who "consented" to the rent boost to sign a statement for use at the hearing. Company officials said the petition will be filed in the near future.

France Saves Dollars by Cut In Gas Ration

By Sidney Keller

Paris, Sept. 9 (NYHT).—The cabinet decreed new austerity measures today for France's dollar-shy economy.

To reduce gasoline consumption by 40 per cent, private motorists will get no gasoline after their present 20 - liter (five - gallon) monthly ration runs out. Privileged motorists, who use their automobiles for work, will have to make this month's ration last through November.

Further, no gasoline will be issued for limousines (vehicles of more than 15 horsepower, metric rating). Even cabinet ministers will have to use smaller cars, the ministers said.

Premier Paul Ramadier announced these decisions after a cabinet meeting today and then called a meeting of his economic advisers.

After this meeting, Robert Schuman, Minister of Finance, announced in a broadcast that he is leaving for London tomorrow to confer with heads of the International Reconstruction Bank and the Exchange Stabilization Fund on the possibility of obtaining the 250 million dollars still outstanding from the 500-million-dollar loan authorized for France six months ago by the Bank.

The finance minister said these dollars would be used for purchases of coal and cement. Referring to France's domestic budget, he said drastic economy measures will be necessary to stop inflation brought on by administrative spending.

Earlier, Schuman had met with members of the United States congressional subcommittee, here to study France's economic and political situation with regard to Marshall Plan aid. The Congressmen also conferred with Emmanuel Monick, governor of the Bank of France, and at the United States embassy with Will Clayton, Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs.

Allies Study U. S. Plan on Autrian Oil

Vienna, Sept. 9 (AP).—The four-power Allied commission on the Austrian peace treaty accepted for "further study" a United States compromise proposal on the Austrian oil question today.

The American proposal, presented by David Ginsberg, affects a "substantial amount" of the Austrian oil production. Oil is considered the key subject of the disputed Article 35, which, in turn, is considered the key to the entire draft treaty.

Ginsberg's proposals encompass the following points:

1. The Bitumen Law, formulated and drafted in Berlin after the 1938 Anschluss, was Nazi in origin and the Austrian government is not bound by any oil concessions issued under it.

2. Old production rights which the Germans acquired legally are German assets which may be transferred as reparations under the Potsdam agreement.

3. Old exploration rights no longer exist, but the former owners of these rights have an equitable right to request from the present Austrian government concession rights of the same value. (Under this plan the Russians could apply as "agents" of the former German owners).

4. All machinery installed by the Germans on the oil fields, regardless of their right to do so, are transferable German assets.

Farben Made Guns in 1936 Court Hears

Nuernberg, Germany, Sept. 9 (AP).—An employe of I. G. Farben in an affidavit presented to an American War Crimes Court today said the combine started manufacture of antiaircraft guns in quantity in 1936 and concealed the purpose of gun fuses by labelling them as "gas pressure meters."

Another witness, Hans Wagner, a Farben chemist, testified at the trial of 23 directors of the firm that the chemical trust began the large-scale manufacture of poison gas in 1938 on orders of the German high command.

Hermann Fritz Ruther, another employe, said in a statement that the company promoted a phoney unemployment in 1932-33 to win converts to Adolf Hitler's Nazi Party and help boost it into power.

The layoff of thousands, he said, took place soon after Hitler's party made a poor showing in the November 6, 1932, elections.

The court announced that the case against Max Brueggeman would be dropped. Brueggeman is in hospital with a heart ailment which may prove fatal.

UAW Reiterates Noncompliance Is Law Stand

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 9 (AP).—The international executive board of the CIO United Auto Workers today "voted to maintain its present position of noncompliance" with provisions of the Taft-Hartley labor law, pending CIO action at the national convention next month in Boston.

UAW President Walter P. Reuther said the action came on a motion to comply with the provisions of the new law, chief stumbling block of which is the requirement for union heads to file non-Communist affidavits with the NLRB.

The original UAW stand was taken at a special one-day meeting of the board in Detroit last July—before most of the provisions of the law became effective, Reuther said.

Any recommendation of the UAW board, which represent sabout 920,000 workers, would be certain to carry weight at next month's CIO convention.

The board heard a plea yesterday from a Baltimore local, which claimed that the NLRB would refuse to recognize the results of a contested election among employes of the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Co., if the UAW won.

Anti-Red Rule Exceeds Intent Taft Says

Chicago, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—Sen. Robert A. Taft, (R., Ohio) co-author of the Taft-Hartley law, said today he never intended that the law should deny National Labor Relations Board services to the entire AFL or CIO if any of their top officials refuse to sign anti-Communist affidavits.

Taft, in Chicago en route to California for a Western speaking tour, said the question "never came up" before Congress of whether a union's "officers" are those of its own international, or also include officials of the parent body with which it is affiliated.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Mere Males Still as Baffled by Women as Ever

Al Brier's puzzled look probably stems from an encounter with a lady friend, a condition which is certainly not unusual among males.

When Al spent a year on the Colorado desert on a construction project, he became thoroughly fed up with the sight of sand and cactus and more sand and more cactus. In fact, he longed for the sight of a tree.

When he finally got back to his native haunts, he fairly feasted his eyes on such taken-for-granted sights as trees and flowers and shrubs.

But the other day his lady friend said goodbye to him, explaining her departure from Washington with the words:

"Too many trees in Washington."

And that explains Al's puzzled look. But don't you fret about not understanding women, Al. Now that the secret of atomic energy has been worked out, perhaps our scientists will be able to devote more time to studying the complexities of the female mind.

HOT DOGS & ONE BEEF

Jim Ober of 501 12th st. nw. asks:

"Can you cross 13th st. at E while the 'walk' sign is on? I can't.

"The 'don't walk' stays on for a good long time. When the 'don't' finally goes out, it stays out for only 11 seconds.

"That's just long enough to get everybody out to the island in the middle of 13th st. and strand them there.

"I think I'll open a hot dog stand on that island and make my first million."

MAIL BAG

S. M. S. wonders whether any District Liners know the reason for the dozens of small holes that have been drilled in Mount Vernon Memorial Highway . . . Real Estate Man Stanton Kolb says "cheers for Mrs. Riley's pet peeve about the bell-happy motormen" . . . M. B. d'A. of the Dodge Hotel agrees with John Reilly's complaint about women who use the word "adorable" promiscuously, and suggests some alternatives based on the various senses: "beauteous, melodious, delectable, aromatic, and velvety." (What happened to "cute?")

GIVE-AWAYS

"Beautiful angora cat, female, 7 months old." (MIchigan 5763.)

PET PEEVE

Ernestine P. Graves, of 1407 16th st. nw., adds another pet peeve to our rapidly growing list:

"My special hate is the fellow who carries on a loud conversation at the movies, making it impossible for others to hear the picture's dialogue.

Apparently these pests care nothing about the show, or about the remainder of the audience.

"If they want to talk, why don't they go sit on a park bench?"

THANKS, TROUPERS

A vaudeville show which escaped the attention of the professional dramatic critics was recently staged out in Greenbelt, Md.

It was a very fine show, in spite of the low admission charge. Participants were:

Lorraine and Roger Lewis, Lois and Gail Stitt, Sandra and Jackie Hufendick, Mickey and June Scully, Billy Scott, and Patsy Brown.

The show grossed $3, and the entire sum is now en route to Children's Hospital.

ADD SIGNS

Anybody who is wondering where he can get a fish laundered is hereby referred to a sign spotted in Baltimore by Lawyer David Wiener. It says:

"Fish Laundry and Dry Cleaning."

ANGLOPHOBE

J. R. W. clips a news headline which says "Bevin Wants to Share Our Gold," and encloses the comment:

"Share? For my part the British can have you to themselves."

Shame on you, old boy. It's not cricket to kick a nation when it's down.

HOW TRUE!

Edna Mae Wilson of 16 W. Uhler ave., Alexandria, Va., sighs "honesty is the best policy after all," and quotes from a recent real estate ad:

". . . and we are offering these homes at ridiculous prices."

Mencken Casts One for Himself

NEW YORK.—Mayor O'Dwyer visited the ailing Fiorello LaGuardia and assured him: "If there's anything you feel you could have gotten if you still were mayor of the city—doctors, serum, planes, anything—say the word, and it's yours. If it's about your health, I want you to act as if you still were in City Hall" . . . The President's Committee on Bigotry is finishing its report this week and will submit it to the White House in a few days.

Last week a Los Angeles newspaper headlined the announcement, "Betty Grable Is America's Highest Salaried Woman." Two days later the same paper, reviewing her newest picture, headlined the story: "Betty Grable Proves She Can Act" . . .

H. L. Mencken voted for himself in the balloting for Whit Burnett's "The World's Best." Mencken's ballot contained this memo: "I wouldn't cast my vote for any contemporary of mine for $250,000 cash" . . .

At Henry Ford's thirtieth birthday party in Long Island last Friday, one of the guests offered a new Chevrolet car to him as a birthday gift. It was the only gift Ford refused to accept.

One of America's best-known screen stars went on a drinking bat in New York. His Hollywood employer ordered that he be flown back to the coast. When all the airline companies refused to sell him passage, because of his condition, his employer ordered: "Then charter a plane to bring him home" . . . The plane-chartering company insisted that a doctor accompany the star, and so a young interne was asked to make the flight. When the star was delivered safely to his studio, the studio head asked the interne: "Well, how much do we owe you for this?" . . . The interne knew that the studio couldn't risk suit. He asked, and got, $4000.

Elliot Reid, who has the leading role in the Betty Comden-Adolph Green musical, never has sung publicly before this. He once asked Nancy Walker: "Do you think I can bring anything to musical comedy?" Miss Walker told him: "Yes. $3.30" . . . J. B. Priestly says that Hollywood is a place where businessmen are trying to be artists, and artists are trying to be businessmen.

Martha Stewart joins the Jack Paar radio show October 1 . . . Miss Stewart was in the Stork Club yesterday, wearing a platina mink jacket given her by her husband, Joe E. Lewis, who sighed: "I gave it to her for her birthday, but now she wants to keep it."

Last week the Empire Theater was used as the background for a scene in the new Ronald Coleman movie. A prop billboard was displayed: "Max Lister presents Anthony John as 'Othello.'" Coleman's photo, showing him as the dark, bearded Othello, was used in the billboard. After the scene was photographed, the camera-crew forgot to remove the prop billboard. The next morning there was a line at the Empire Theater, to buy tickets for "Othello" . . .

Jorge Sanchez, the Cuban sugar man and last of the Broadway playboys, is out of the hospital. He says he paid $100 a stitch for his operation . . .

One of Washington's most successful law firms hasn't a single law book in its suite of offices—only phone books and the private numbers of Government officials.
